TAKING UP THE CROSS.

When Jesus told his disciples that he must suffer many things and be rejected and slain, he added, "If any man will come after me let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Lukejiz. 23. The cross, that symbol of shame and agony, was henceforth to be intimately associated with discipleship. Bearing the cross as Jesus bore it through the streets of Jerusalem, bearing it every passover week, this was to be the test it. The only way is that revealed by of a true following for all time. When our Saviour. He must deny himself we read those words we look us for cross-bearers in our homes and on the streets of Christendom. And the things we see, as well as those we see not, tempt us to ask if Christ has any followers in these them he will find Christ himself and days of self-indulgence and ease. Let us inquire, then, what the Saviour means by taking up the cross. Lange's the aged, bed-ridden believer will say definition in his notes on this passage to him, "Christ is here. He comes is : "A voluntary readiness to suffer the utmost in this world for Christ." We are not to do just the things that Christ did, but we are to have the the spirit of Christ. As he "endured the cross despising the shame" for us, we are to endure for him whatever self-denial, reproach, or persecution results from fidelity in his service. A man might go to Jerusalem, and march into temptation and gets caught in a up and down the Via Dolorosa, day snare just as the Bible forewarned after day, with a wooden cross on his him, When financial troubles come, shoulders, and yet be a crazy crank , or he tries to comfort himself with the an arrant hypocrite. It is certain reflection that it is through much trithat not one of the Lord's disciples | bulation that we must enter the kingwho heard these words offered to help dom. But enduring chastisement for him bear his cross when he staggered our sins is very different from volununder its weight between the Judg- tary sacrifice and self-denial for Jesus ment Hall and Calvary, Simon of sake. The cross is to be taken up Cyrene did not volunteer, but was com- freely, and not simply to be borne bepelled by the soldiers to carry it. But from love for ure "in infirmities, in reproaches, in us; because he was bearing our sins necessities, in persecutions, in distreses, for Christ's sake." The spirit of primitive Christianity was cross-bear- If we love him, if we are grateful to ing, and thousands not only endured him, if we long to be like him, we will the loss of property and friends, but even suffered martyrdom rather than deny their crucified Lord. But we are told that a great change all along our way. Who of us will has passed over the world since the days of the apostles. The offence of the cross has ceased. It is no longer a symbol of shame, but has become a badge of honor. Men march proudly through our streets wearing crosses in crimson and gold. Women of wealth have their jewels set in the form of a cross. Great cathedrals are built in a style of architecture suggested by that instrument of shame and agony on Calvary ; and far up, on dome and battlement, are gilded crosses to catch the first rays of the morning sun. To cross daily, is like telling him to put on his regalia of rank, the symbols of his power and pride. To tell a woman, now-a-days, to take up her cross is telling her to put on her costliest ornaments. Grant what these facts seem to indicate that the offence of the cross has ceased, that the world has reached a formal recognition of the claims of Christ; yet this does not change the conditions of discipleship. Christ did not tell his followers to take up his cross daily, as a representation of it, but each to take up his own. As God had a cross prepared in Jerusalem to test the fidelity of his well-beloved Son, so he has crosses prepared daily for all who profess to be followers of that Son. If we take up these crosses cheerfully, if we bear them faithfully and lovingly, then we know that we are disciples indeed. But if we shrink love are empty and vain. The world's formal recognition of Christianity must not deceive us. Its

Some people think that all suffering is cross-bearing. A man is selfish grasping. He will be rich and so falls dustrial Union with the work done by arise, to fill one's mind with a great our own societies; but its influence is black pall of unhealthful, wearing, wider, since it has branches in nearly dreary thinking. To rise above the tyranny of circumstances is no easy all the large cities and towns, and extends into the country. There is need of similar enlargement for our own Young Women's Association, and through the efforts of some active workers, progress is being made in this do by getting above them. Our thinkdirection.

The National Society for the protection of young girls, another beneficent English organization, has cared for and trained nearly 3,000 young girls in sixty-one years of its existence. Not long since the Princess Mary and Princess Victoria of Teck presided at the opening of the Churchill Home, a restaurant and lodging house for London workwomen, intended to offer lodging, food, warmth and recreation to a portion of the 25,000 women who toil in factories in the neighborhood of St. Paul's. We need not dwell upon the benefits of such work as this, and it is pleasant to find it helped forward by princesses of the royal family.

In Paris, Miss Ada Leigh, an English woman, has been engaged for eighteen years in caring for English and American women and girls who are left friendless and helpless in a strange land. Many English girls drift to Paris in search of employment or are allured by false agencies ; and Miss Leigh states that where one succeeds fifty come to irremediable harm. She has gained the assistance of the Baroness Alphonse de Rothschild and other ladies of rank and wealth, and in connection with the Home which she has established she has an orphanage and a church.

These are a few instances of what women are doing for women. Fashionable women are proverbially condemned as selfish and heartless, and yet in nearly all large cities we find women task, but he who would do his best work for God must get away from the influences of the mists which he cannot sweep away, and that he cau only ing belongs to our Master, and enters into the service we render for or against him. The work we do is sure to be influenced by the character of our thoughts. We find help in God's word, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because fol he trusted in thee." And here is a word of cheer from Whittier: Know well, my soul, God's hands con-Whate'er thou fearest; Round him in calmest music rolls 18 Whate'er thou hearest.

What to thee is shadow, to him is day, And the end he knoweth: and not on a blind and aimless The spirit goeth.

ALMOST WELL."

Richard Baxter was for many years an invalid. He lived in habitual expectation of the near approach of death. His "Saints everlasting Rest" was written on the verge of heaven. His biographer says that "he was certainly one of the most diseased and afflicted men that ever reached the full 61 ordinary limits of human life." But M he had habitual foretastes of that rest" on which his thoughts so much dwelt, and of which he wrote so for BOO cibly. The day before he died, in conversation with some friends that called upon him, he said: "I have pain; there is no arguing against sense. but I have peace, I have peace." He was quite willing to depart. When asked how he was he said, "Almost And so it is as regards every true believer. In this world, where sin and death reign, he is never perfectly well. His body is mortal. The house in which he dwells is frail and perishing. It is often the seat of aches and pains, that are the precursors of death, which is sure to come soon or late. Nor is it ever wholly well as regards the soul. That is sadly disordered by sin. This is the believer's sorest trouble. It occasions him much uneasiness. It is to him a source of great disquietude. Many and severe are his conflicts with his inward corruptions. Long and fierce is his warfare with that fearful trio of enemies, the world, the flesh, and the devil. When he would do good, evil is present with him. Disheartened and discouraged, he is forced to cry out, " O wretched man that I am !" Neither bodily nor spiritually will it ever be wholly well with him in this world. That consummation, so devoutly to be wished, is reserved for him in heaven. There he will be, not only almost, but per-

WOMAN'S WORK FOR WOMAN.

It is only within a few years that philanthropic work for women has been systematically organized in our larger cities, but much has been done in a comparatively short time, and this has been largely due to the labor of women in the interest of their own sex. In New York we have a Young Women's Christian Association-which is about born to luxury who are sacrificing some of their ease and comfort to smooth the paths of their less fortunate sisters. There are more noble action than the world knows of or suspects, and there are few more noble and beneficent than these. It should be noticed, too, that the philanthrophic work sustained by women is not merely sentimental; it is intensely practical. It is in the direction of helping and fitting women and girls to help themselves. This is the truest charity, and on this account we welcome the increase of Woman's Exchanges, and similar institutions intended to extend to working-women the protection and encouragement which they may rightly ask from women more favored by fortune.- Selected.
