----OUR PHILADELPHIA LETTER.

There is upon the statute book of this city a local option liquor law, which applies to six of the principal wards. In the last municipal election once familiar with all the arrange- a vote was taken which speaks most discouragingly of the temperance sentiment of the voters of those wards. Now it was more ing that prohibitory measures were like a pleasure trip; I had no planning being discussed before the state Legisthat the recent election is a true showvoted on all these years, shows that the temperance people regarded it as of no service to them. Thenon-licencing of the saloons in certain wards of a city intermixed with wards granting licence. could effect nothing as to the prevention of intemperance, as allaman would need to do would be to go beyond the limits of the ward in which no licence was granted and get all the liquor he wished. Indeed the temperance people have had an unfavourable experience of local option. Previous to the year 1872 there was a State local option law, but it was a dead letter, owing to the apathy and indifference of the temperance people, and in that year it was repealed, and now there is an agitation for a prohibitory constitutional amendment for the Commonwealth. From what I have seen and heard of the temperance opinion, I believe it would be exceedingly difficult to carry out or enforce such a law, but if it were put into the constitution it could not be repealed, and after a few years a sufficiently strong temperance sentiment might be developed to fairly enforce it. But as it is now, from all the information I have obtained, and from my own personal observation, rum is dictator and ballot box controller. One thing that very much astonished me on election day, was, that most of the polling booths were held in saloons. The monster evil, intemperance, has a most horrible record in this magnificent city. It has stolen away the homes from many families and turned the helpless inmates out into the pelting storms of penury and want, roofless, comfortless and hopless. . It has produced, and is producing daily, the highest crimes and gravest misdemeanors against the peace of society and the prosperity of this Commonwealth ; it is ruthlessly blighting the budding prospects of many of the talented and wealthy sons of Philadelphia; it is vandalizing and rendering impotent the massive strength of much of our middle life ; it is irreverent by tality we had been brought back from dishonoring much of our venerable old age ; it is sacriligeously profaning and grostituting the sacred mission and benign influence of our intimate friendships; it is invading our peace, our public and private safety, with the stealth of the assassin, and with the cool-bloodedness of the outlaw ; it scorns the precepts of high heaven. this district. -A NEW SOCIETY. Some people in England have started a "Speak-no evil society." Its members, ere they transgress the command which is in its name, are to ask themselves these questions, - " Is it true ?" "Is it kind?" "Is it necessary?" The society may do some good. But the end it proposes to accomplish while very proper, is not at all original. We have an impression that a society called the Christian church has had embodied in its code the same obligation.
