

Parliament.

A Jubilee address to the Queen engaged the attention of the House, eliciting patriotic speeches. Sir John A. MacDonald said:

We in Canada have undergone great changes during the past fifty years. A few months after the Queen ascended the throne Canada was in arms, not against the sovereign, but because of discontent, happily long ago passed away, leaving the people more determined than ever to bear and forbear and live peaceably and harmoniously with each other. We had drawbacks and vicissitudes but the general movement was one of prosperity and development. We have contests as to the best mode to develop the country, but all, he believed, at the bottom of their hearts desired to see the country developed. We were able in this jubilee year to present ourselves to the Queen a happy and prosperous country. All the world pays tribute to the Queen's personal merits as wife, mother, woman and sovereign. It were useless to paint the lily or gild refined gold and so it was needless for him to dwell on the Queen's worthiness of homage from the people of Canada.

Mr. Laurier, in seconding the premier's motion, regretted the absence of Mr. Blake, owing to illness. He was pleased that it devolved on one of Her Majesty's subjects of French origin to express lively emotions of gratitude to the Queen. The sentiments contained in the address were shared by all races in Canada. The Victorian era was the grandest, not only in the history of England, but of the human race. The conquests and advancements of the period were marvellous. The conquests of war had been great, but those of peace greater by far. He dwelt upon the freedom enjoyed, the development of letters, arts and sciences. English letters, he said, never shed a purer light than during the reign of Queen Victoria, who was the most perfect constitutional sovereign the world has ever seen. No class ought to be more grateful than her subjects of French origin. It was a labour of love for him to join in every sentiment contained in the address.

At the close of Mr. Laurier's speech the members all rose, and joined by the persons in the galleries sang with great enthusiasm, "God Save the Queen."

In answer, Hon. Mr. Foster said a light would be placed at Dipper Harbor, St. John, and that a light would be erected at West Head, Cape Sable Island.

Mr. Sproul moved his resolution proposing a general pardon of convicts in dominion penitentiaries in commemoration of her Majesty's jubilee year.

Hon. Mr. Thompson said the proposal was made from mistaken motives. He did not regard it as a very appropriate way of celebrating her Majesty's jubilee, and in a great many cases it would not be an act of kindness to the prisoners who were totally unworthy of clemency. The motion was withdrawn.

Sir Charles Tupper has given notice of a resolution to grant $300,000 as a loan to the Fredericton & St. Marys Bridge company at 5 per cent. interest, the government to have power to take over the bridge in the event of the company failing to fulfil their obligations.

Mr. Jamieson introduced his resolution respecting the prohibition of liquors. He and Mr. Fisher who seconded the resolution, made strong speeches in favor of prohibition. Mr. Girouard spoke against trying to legislate men into sobriety and undertook to show that milder beverages were not productive of evil results. He moved an amendment that ale, porter, cider, claret and other light wines be exempt from the operation of the Scott Act. Some of Mr. Girouard's remarks aroused Mr. Freeman, with the result that he delivered a powerful temperance speech.

Hon. Mr. Foster spoke strongly against injuring the Scott Act by allowing the sale of fermented liquors.

After several speeches twelve o'clock came and Sir John said the important question should not be hurried through. He moved that the debate be adjourned till Monday.

I would recommend them to the public as an invaluable remedy.
