St James Religion.

That is, practical religion. There is, in fact, no other true religion, for " faith without works is dead ;" the devils have that false religion and something more, for they believe and tremble. Show your faith by your works ; it is the only evidence you can furnish which St James will accept. That good story of how you were conat 9 a. m., is doubtless perfectly true; nobody will doubt. Don't think you can work ; restrains him from selfish living, and makes experience precious to his neighbors. They like to get a glimpse at the fires which run this human engine. We have heard of men whose "experience" could not be eloquently told within twenty subbeam and bright as the light in miles of home. We have known of your pulpits. Don't be affected and men whose wives blushed when they heard the strange story in meeting .this blazing fire of devotion. We are not criticising: we are en forcing a lesson. An ounce of St. James religion is worth a ton of spasms and eloquence and -do-lessness. The ounce works like a leaven in meal and transforms the man and his fellows the ton is only material for a brush fire which has no function except to destroy the brush. The effectual and fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. But note that " righteous man;" as if St. James foreknew some shifty dead-faith people who are not righteous though they are fervent and in a sense effectual. The truth is, that there is never any question of the piety of a man who acts as St. James writes. If he keeps the whole law, is without respect of persons, suffers patiently, "keeps the peace of the church, commits no one of the sins the lip, and in one word is "righteous" while actively merciful and faithfulkeeping himself unspotted from the world-nobody will question the genuineness of his faith. Give Your Wills To Christ.

Thousands of times unconverted people have been asked to give their hearts to Christ, and this request is generally thought to cover the whole ground of the necessity of the case. But it is evident that, unless the sinner yields the control of his will to Christ, first, he never will give his heart to Him. The heart is so strongin the best sense. Ten or fifteen thing : his sweetest pleasures will be ly under the government of the will, years ago the 'pulpits of this land de- brought out of his sharpest pains, and that it is completely subjugated to the voted themselves to metaphysics and hardships will pioneer his richest power and control of the will: and, unless the will give its free consent to As this world is only a training a transfer of rulership, the sinner's heart must remain in captivity to the will.

A NEGLECTED DUTY .- No man has any right to manage his affairs in such a way that his sudden death would follows:bring burdens and losses on other people. There may be rare cases where a man really cannot help entanglements, or where from inex perience, or lack of judgment, he ha brought his affairs into such a state that the interests of others depend upon his life ; but he should make all possible haste to extricate himself from such a position. Honor and honesty demand that he should so conduct his business that his death should cause no one to be wronged. And as to dying, although all men everywhere believe that every othe man will surely die, yet they unite in thinking that they themselves ar exceptions to this rule; or, at least, they act as if they thought so : this is radically wrong. It is every man's duty, in every transaction in life, to be influenced by the fact that at day or at any hour he may die.-Selected. ----

The Good Minister.

The saintly McCheyne said, "A holy minister is an awful weapon in the hand of God." Mark the designation-"a holy minister." Holiness is likeness to God. Its presence is a rebuke to sin and an encouragement to piety. To be holy it is not necessary that a preacher should proclaim his devotion to the Master at all times. No man need be told at mid-day that the sun is shedding its beams upon the earth. The bright luminary shines and silently declares its brightness. So true holiness will be seen in conduct and heard in words, and beam forth in the expression of one's countenance. God sometimes blesses the preaching does so in spite of a manifest lack of Take what the good God provides you, but say of it, "It passeth away; for indeed it is but a temporary supply for a temporary need." Never suffer your goods to become your God.-Spurgeon.

The great failing and doubt in the hearts of God's people is that they are always speaking of things that concern themselves instead of the things that concern God. They say, Am I happy? Am I feeling as ought? Am I loving as I onght? They look too much at their love to God instead of what God says, of what God thinks and delights in.
