I judge that he was neither a caviller, nor a disciple, but one curious to see what reply Christ would make to one of the puzzling theological problems of the day. Which is the first commandment of all? First in importance; the most fundamental one. The Jews divided the commandments of their law into greater and lesser; but were not agreed in the particulars. And with all thy soul. Soul is the individual existence, the person himself. The two words are united to teach that the entire, undivided person must share in that which it has to perform with the heart. With all thy mind.
