Be Careful What You Sow Be careful what you sow, boys! For seed will surely grow, boys!

The dew will fall, The rain will splash, The clouds will darken, And the sunshine flash; And the boy who sows good seed to-day Shall reap the crop to-morrow.

Be careful what you sow, girls ! For every seed will grow, girls ! Though it may fall Where you cannot know, Yet in summer and shade It will surely glow; And the girl who sows good seed to-day Shall reap the crop to-morrow.

Be careful what you sow, boys! For the seeds will surely grow, boys! If you plant bad seed By the wayside high, You must reap the harvest By-and bye:

And, the boy who saws wild oats to-day Must reap wild oats to-morrow.

Be careful what you sow, girls! For all the bad will grow, girls! And the girl who now, With a careless hand, Is scattering thistles

Over the land, Must know that whatever she sows to-day She must reap the same to-morrow.

What Christie Did.

Christie Evans stood in the hall-door looking down the street rather disconsolately. Grace Dennis was just driving round the corner; she had stopped to see if Christie would not go with her over to Wire Village and try to pick up a class for the mission Sunday school.

"I wish I could," said Christie, wistfully, "but I can't possibly. We've a house full of boarders, you know, and I'm the only girl we keep."

"I wish I could have gone," thought Christie, as she watched Grace out of sight. "I should just love to have a class. I would try my very best to help them; it must be beautiful to feel that you are helping any one to be better. I wish I wasn't so tied up here at home."

And then all at once Christie turned herself squarely about and went out into the kitchen.

"I'm ashamed of you, Christie Evans, to be fretting because you can't do just what you want to. If you were needed over there at Wire Village I rather guess the way would be made plain for you to go. Instead of that it is as clear as clear can be that you are needed right here in this identical kitchen to wash these dishes, and then there are all those rooms that want sweeping. Now if I was in your place I wouldn't spend any more time lamenting because I couldn't be where I wasn't needed, but I'd do the work that was given me just the very best that I knew how."

Whereupon Christie donned her apron and set about doing the dishes. "You here?" said Miss Tompkins, coming out into the kitchen on an errand. "I saw Grace Dennis drive up, and thought perhaps she had come to take you to ride."

'So she did," answered Christie, cheerfully; "but you see I'm so indispensable to the welfare of this household that I can't get away very often. If I could have my choice of course I'd choose a higher 'spear' of action, as Miss Kent tells about, but I didn't, so I must make the best of it. I'll try to do my out-and-out best where I am, and maybe I'll rise some time."

Miss Tompkins went back up stairs without the dust pan she had come for.

Mrs. Ashton dropped her book. "I declare," she said, with a little laugh, "that actually seemed like a warning. Evidently my conscience is not quite clear. I'll go now, as I knew your efforts to make Jack a better all the time I ought."

I don't much care what," said Will Adams, as he finished his day's work. "I'm tired and blue, and I don't know slowly, as we have exactly-tried at what all. I'll to go the theatre with all. "Sarah has been here all day," said Miss Tompkins' brother's wife to him that night. "And you don't know how much she has helped me; she was so good, too; that helped most of all.' "I got twelve to promise to come Sunday," said Grace, stopping at the gate again after tea. "I'm ever so glad," answered Christie, just as brightly as though her heart didn't ache. "Well, it doesn't matter if I haven't anything to tell of, if I've only done my duty," she thought, as Grace went on. "I've washed dishes, swept and dusted, that's all; but I didit the best I could.'

But it wasn't all, you know; perhaps never is, if we are sure to do heartily, as unto the Lord, whatever is plainly given us to do. -Our Youth.

Two Sides of a Story.

I declare, I believe I'll never speak to Jack Crane again. He's the meanest fellow in school. He cheats in all game, and he's the biggest tell-tale I

Harry Crowell said this all in one breath as he flung his books in one chair and himself in another on his return from school.

Advice To Boys.

Horace Mann gives this bit of ad vice to boys. "You are made to be kind, boys-generous, magnanimous, If there is a boy in school who has a club-foot, don't let him know you ever saw it. If there is a boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him some part of the game that doesn't require running. If there is a hungry one, give him part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lessons. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before. If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show by their countenance how much better it is than to have a fuss. And remember who said, 'Love your enemies,' and 'Bless them which curse you.'

GRUEL made after the following directions is a most nutritious and palatable dish for the convalescent; Pour a quart of hot water into a clean earthen or tin vessel over a brisk fire. When it boils stir into it two tablespoonfuls of corn or oat meal mixed smoothly in just water enough to make a thin paste; put a lump of butter in the size of a hickory nut, and stir frequently for half an hour; then add a gill of sweet milk, and when it boils again throw in the upper crust of hard baked bread cut in small pieces; let it boil ten minutes, then add a shake of black pepper, a little salt, a pinch of grated nutmeg, and a little more butter. The yelk of an egg boiled hard and mashed makes an agreeable addition as the appetite improves. In cases of severe illness the butter and spice should be omitted, and, as the strength returns, the ingredients may be varied to suit the demands.

HIS NIGHT-SHIRT POCKET.-The other day an eight year old boy importuned his mother for a night-shirt, "just like papa's with a pocket in it, His mother made him one, and the first night he wore it he went to bed

In the morning, when his mother took the robe off, she found in one pocket a couple of seed cakes, three matches, a toothpick, a small silver little while to push the accumulation When the little fellow was questioned and send you some next time.
