The Boys We Need.

Here's to the boy who's not afraid To do his share of work; Who never is by toil dismayed, And never tries to shirk.

The boy whose heart is brave to meet All lions in the way; Who's not discouraged by defeat, But tries another day.

The boy who always means to do The very best he can: Who always keeps the right in view. And aims to be a man.

Such hoys as these will grow to be The men whose hands will guide The future of our land; and we Shall speak their names with pride.

All honor to the boy who is A man at heart, I say; Whose legend on his shield is this: "Right always wins the day." - to ten Days.

What Harry Missed.

There certainly was a mischievous sparkle in grandmother's eyes, as she added the last few words to a note she was writing, folded it up, and put it in an envelope. In spite of her gray hair and feeble steps, grandmother enjoyed a little mischief now and then quite as well as any of her grand-

"Harry," she said, going to the door and addressing a boy who was stretched luxuriously in a hammack swung across the shady porch, "will you take this note down to the apothecary's for me? I forgot to send it by Zed when he went to the store."

"O grandma!" and Harry's face wrinkled up into a perfect snarl of frowns. "Need I go now? It's so "You won't find it very warm riding on your bicycle on the shady side of the street," grandmother answered. "Can't Zed go when he comes back?

I'm just fixed so comfortably!" "What's Zed wanted for?" asked a cheery voice, and the flushed, goodhumored face of the chore-bcy looked around the end of the porch. "Here's the basket of things, Mrs. Lindsay,' he added, as he put down a well-filled basket on the steps and wiped his perspiring face. "Did you want me for anything, ma'am?" he asked.

"I was asking Harry if he would not go down to the apothecary's for me, but he doesn't seem inclined,' Mrs. Lindsay answered.

"I'll go for you," Zed offered promptly. "I'll cool off walking

"Well, Zed, I will let you go if you will be so kind," grandmother said after a moment's pause. "Be sure and do all the errand, Zed?" she called after him as he reached the gate.

"Yes'm," Zed answered, with a bewildered look on his round, freckled face. Didn't he always do all that he was told to? That caution sounded as if he had been remiss in something.

He understood it twenty minutes later, when, after the clerk had put up the package of spices, he stepped around behind the soda fountain, which Zed had been watching rather wistfully, thinking how refreshing a draught of cool soda would be, and wondering what "Ice-cream Soda"

"What will you have, sir?" asked the clerk.

"Why, I don't want any soda!" stammered Zed. "That is, I'd like some well enough; but I haven't got any money." "That's all right," answered the clerk. "The order in this letter is to give the bearer a glass of ice-cream soda, so I suppose you won't object?'

A broad smile illumined Zed's face, as he remembered Mrs. Lindsay's injunction to do all the errand. She had meant this treat for him, since Harry had declined to do her errand. "Strawberry!" hesaid, as promptly as if he had been used to ordering ice-cream soda every day of his life. Wasn't it good, though, that tall glass of sparkling soda, with that delicious, ice cold lump of strawberry cream floating in it? Zed breathed sigh of perfect cortent, as he sat back you happy. in his chair and leisurely dipped out long-handled spoon.

Zed was glad that the bowl of the spoon was so small, because then the cream would last so much longer.

When he went home, grandmother was sitting on the porch with her knitting, while Harry still rolled about in the hammock, having some pangs of conscience in regard to his disobligingness, though grandma uttered never a word of reproach.

groaned Harry. "I'd have gone in a pest, which beat full in his face. minute, grandma, if I had known

"Yes, I have no doubt you would," grandma answered tranquilly; "but I thought that the boy who was willing to do my errand for the sake of being | hinder me?" obliging deserved the treat."

"Oh, to think what I missed!" Harry mourned as he fell back in the hammock; and I am afraid he regretted the lost ice-cream soda more than the fact that he had grumbled about doing an errand for dear, patient grandmother, who was always devising pleasures for him.

his unwillingness, and went at once | cleaner for a little wet and a wipe !" but he never found ice-cream soda waiting for him at the end of his journey, as Zed did that afternoon.

That was something he had missed. -Sunday School Times.

Be Courteous, Boys.

"I treat him as well as he treats me," said Hal.

"Then you really think that politeness and courtesy are not needed among boys?"

Hal, thus pressed, said he didn't exactly mean that; but his father who, had listened, now spoke:

"A boy or a man who measures his treatment of others by their treatment of him, has no character of his own. He will never be kind, or generous, or man, he will be so in spite of the boorishness of others. If he is to be noble, no other boy's meanness will change his nature." And very earnestly the father added: "Remember this, my boy, you lower your own self every time you are guilty of an unworthy action because some one else is. Be true to your best self, and no boy can drag you down."-Anon.

A Sermon for the Little Folks.

"If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."—John 13:17. I. "These things;" that is, your duties, wherever you are: 1. At home, obedience and respect to parents, and kindness to brothers, sisters, and servants. 2. At school, respect to teachers, and faithfulness in study, and fairness in play. 3. At church, be quiet, listen, worship, and give your hearts to the

4. On the street, good manners, kindness, minding your own business.

II. How should you do your duty? 1. Not for pay. That is a low motive. Some always ask: "What will you give me?" But from love. So the Saviour did when a boy at Nazareth. So the angels do God's will (which is only another name for duty). This will make you do it cheerfully.

3. Better every day. By trying to do your duties you will become more skilful. So you improve in reading, writing, and music. Peter says, "Grow in grace."

III. Doing duty makes you happy. Sin cannot make you happy. Sin did not make Eve happy, nor Cain, nor bad manners, no kind of sin, can make the refreshing mixture with a dainty your duty. That is God's reward. That is the promise in the text. Think of this every day for just one week, and see how true it is.

Try, then, to know your duty. Be faithful in doing it for love to God and man. Then you will be happy every day on earth, and forever happy in heaven.-Kind Words.

----The Whistling Plow-Boy.

Mr. Kilpin was going to preach at a "Here's your package, ma'am," Zed little meeting. The weather, although said, "and that ice-cream soda was it was very boisterous, did not stop prime. I'm ever so much obliged for him. He traveled on horseback; and, it." And he beamed all over at the as he trotted on, the storm increased remembrance of his unexpected treat. almost to a hurricane. He felt weary "What !" shouted Harry, sitting up- and cold and wet, and sincerely wishright in the hammock. "Has Jenkins ed himself at home by his comfortable got his ice-cream soda in, and did Zed fireside. Forgetting for a moment the grand object of his ride, he felt some-

The Little Bootblack.

A hundred years ago there lived a little boy in Oxford, whose business it was to clean the boots of the students of the famous university there. He was poor, but bright and smart.

Well, this lad, whose name was George, grew rapidly in favor with the students. His prompt and hearty way of doing things, and his industrious 7 are without solutions. habits and faithful deeds, won their admiration. They saw in him the promise of a noble man, and they proposed to teach him a little every day. Eager to learn, George accepted their proposal; and he soon surpassed his teachers by his rapid progress. "A boy who can blacken boots well can study well," said one of the students. "Keen as a briar," said another, "and pluck enough to make a hero.'

But we cannot stop to tell of his patience and perseverance. He went on step by step just as the song goes,-
