JESUS A GUEST AT A PHARISEE'S FEAST.—Ver. 36. And one of the Pharisees. Simon by name. He was evidently friendly to Jesus, but nothing more. He may have been struck with the wisdom of his discourses, and the power from God displayed in his miracles; and he desired a closer intimacy. He was probably questioning whether indeed this might not be the expected prophet. Desired him that he would eat with him. Invited him to his house. And he went. Jesus went to any place where he could do good. And sat down to most. The custom was to recline on a couch, the head toward the table, the feet outward, and the body supported by the left

JESUS' FEET ANOINTED BY A PENI-TENT SINNER.—Vers. 37, 38. And behold a woman in the city, which ecas a sinner. One who had been of bad character, unchaste. When she knew that Jesus sat at meat. She entered the house uninvited. In the East the presence of uninvited guests, but not in the room, is not uncommon. Brought an alebaster box (or flask) of ointment. As unguent, or fragrant oil. Some kinds of alabaster are of delicate and rich y varied hues, and are extremely beautiful and costly. The alabaster of ointment used by Mary of Bethany to anoint Jesus' feet, cost $45 to $50, equivalent to $300 in our day. And stood at his feet behind him ueeping When she was preparing to pay him homage, she burst into tears at remembrance of her faults. Her tears streamed down upon the Saviour's feet. And began to wash his feet with tears. In humble expression of her penitence of soul. And did wipe them with the hairs of her head. Having the house, by her penitence, by her no cloth to wipe them, she promptly loosed her hair, and with that supplied its place. It was the utmost the punishment of sin, but to a pure possible expression of her love and her feelings in words, but her actions speak her penitence and love.
