"I Look Away."
LANTA WILSON SMITH.
"I look away, I look away,"
So sang the baby one sweet summer day.
"At the sea are mansions 'pared for me."
No touch of sadness warred her childish glee.
And so through all the summer hours
She wandered singing 'mid the garden flowers;
Her little voice rang out the livelong day,
"I look away—away—I look away!"
She plucked the blossoms, taking but the best,
And these she kissed and fondled and caressed,
Till at her feet in fragrant wrecks they lay,
While still she caroled on, "I look away."
And as she sang about the "glory shore,"
"My heav'n, my home forever more,"
We thought her sinless eyes could almost see
The glories of God's fair eternity.
But ah! the little voice was still one day,
No more on earth to sing, "I look away."
From childhood's pure and sunny borderland
She crossed the sea to join an angel-band.
Yet still the little song we seem to hear.
Perhaps it floats from heaven, soft and clear,
To cheer us, as each sad and lonely day,
Through grief and pain, we try to "look away."

INTERNATIONAL LESSON.

Second Quarter—Lesson I.—April 6.

CHRIST'S LAW OF LOVE.
Luke 6: 27-38.

GOLDEN TEXT—As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6: 31.

THE LAW OF LOVE AS APPLIED TO ENEMIES.—Vers. 27-29. But I say unto you. Emphasis on the I. Contrasting Jesus' teaching with the false views of the scribes. Unto you which hear. To everybody, not to the twelve alone. Love your enemies. To those who have precisely the opposite feelings toward you. Do good to them which hate you. Who act out their inward feelings of hatred. Not only your feelings, but your actions, must be contrary to theirs toward you. Bless them that curse you. Speak words of peace, kindness, and love to those who revile and insult you. And pray for them. Bear them upon your hearts to the good Father of all. Which despitefully use you. Treat you abusively. Jesus gives two examples to illustrate the treatment of enemies. And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek offer also the other. That it is only meant as a paradox in the literal sense is shown by the fact that our Lord himself, while true to its spirit did not act on the letter of it. There is no example of patience more perfect than that of the Lord; yet he, when he was smitten, said not, "Behold the other cheek," but "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil; but if well, why smitest thou me?" showing that the turning of the other cheek should be in the heart. And him that taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also. In matters of personal violence and wrong we are not to show a retaliating and revengeful spirit, but a forgiving and generous one. We are to suffer wrong rather than to do wrong. Love is to rule all things; even toward those who in unjust ways show themselves to be our enemies.

THE LAW OF LOVE APPLIED TO ALL.—Vers. 30, 31. Give to every man (without regard to class or condition or race) that asketh of thee. Here again our Lord teaches us by the method of a seeming paradox. By "giving" our Lord meant "conferring a boon"; but mere careless giving now, so far from conferring a boon, perpetrates a curse and inflicts an injury. The joy of the Christian's life is to give, and to help all the people he can in all the ways he can. And of him that taketh away thy goods ask them (demand them) not again. Do not show a revengeful spirit, but by a kind and liberal spirit strive to win back the offender to right views and acts. Whatever you do, avoid a retaliating spirit, and show a spirit of forbearance and love. And as ye would, etc. The Golden Rule here sums up the precepts so far given into one great heavenly principle, obedience to which would make earth a heaven.

THE LAW OF LOVE. REASONS WHY CHRIST'S DISCIPLES SHOULD LIVE ACCORDING TO IT.—Vers. 32-38. For if we love them which love you, what thank have ye, etc. You are doing nothing but what sinners are often doing. There is no mark or proof of the heavenly kingdom and love in that. And if ye lend, etc. Here the same principle applies. Actions which are common to all are no mark of a divine life. But love ye your enemies. That is a mark of heavenly love, for it is the exact opposite of what sinners do. And do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again. Without expectation of reward for what you have done. The acts must proceed from a sincere desire to do good, and not from any selfish motive. And your reward shall be great. What is the reward? More love, a better character, more power to do good, more likeness to the kingdom extended, religion increased, Jesus glorified, souls saved. Ye shall be the children of the Highest. He that does these things proves that he is born of God. For he is kind unto the unthankful. Showing this kindness by making his sun to shine and his rain to fall on just and unjust alike, and in sending his Son to die for the whole world. Be ye therefore merciful. Mercy is kindness and love shown toward those who are guilty, compassion toward the miserable and sorrowing. As your Father is merciful. If you are children you will manifest the character of your Father.

THE LAW OF LOVE APPLIED TO JUDGING OTHERS.—Ver. 37. Judge not. Do not assume the right to find fault with others, and unjustly and falsely condemn them. The word "judge" here does not mean "form an opinion," for every one must do this. It means to impute wrong motives, to put the worst and not the best construction on the actions or words of others. And ye shall not be judged. By others as ye have judged them. Because your goodness will touch their hearts. Condemn not. Without taking into account any reasons for forbearance. Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven. You will be in such a state of heart that God can forgive you. God cannot forgive the unforgiving, for they are not in a repentant state; to forgive such would be contrary to the principles of his kingdom. The unforgiving spirit cannot receive forgiveness, even if it were offered.

THE LAW OF LOVE. ITS HARVEST.—Ver. 38. Give—what? All possible help. It is a comprehensive restatement of the law of love, in practice. And it shall be given unto you. By men to some extent, but chiefly by God. Good measure, pressed down, etc. All you can receive, and more. Shall men give unto your bosom. An allusion to the form of the Eastern garment, which like a large pocket can contain many things in the fold above the girdle. For with the same measure that ye mete. Charity for charity, severity for severity, generosity for generosity. "He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it." The same kind shall be returned. In the same manner. If you give freely, you shall receive freely.

Woman's C. T. Union.

OUR MOTTO.—If God be for us, who can be against us.

Fredericton.

A Conference of Ladies belonging to the W. C. T. U. met in the Temperance Hall last week, and for three days met in session to consider the best ways and means of extending the different Departments of Temperance work.

Eighteen visitors from different Unions were present. Mrs. Dr. Todd of St. Stephen very ably presided over all of the deliberations, and seemed to have the happy faculty of disposing of discussions and perplexing questions in a most practical and hearty manner. Original papers were read by Mrs. Judge Steadman, Mrs. Randolph, and Mrs. Phillips of Fredericton, Mrs. Turnbull of St. John and Miss Brown of Chatham. All of the subjects were treated in a most comprehensive manner, and if possible we hope to secure some of them at least for this column where our readers will be able to judge of their importance.

On Friday evening the W. C. T. U. gave their annual Social to which the Students of the N. B. University and Normal School, with Teachers and friends were invited. The Temperance Hall was well filled with guests and a very fine Musical and Literary Programme was carried out. Mrs. Todd's Solo was much appreciated and her response to the encore so enthusiastically given was a treat to the audience.

Mrs. Smith's talk was very closely followed, and Mrs. Turnbull's paper on Social Purity should be the means of impressing those who listened to her. After this The Temperance Pledge and the World's petition presented by Mrs. Frank Risteen had received many signatures.

Mrs. Geo. Ha't assisted by the Y. W. C. T. U. most generously and gracefully dispensed coffee and cake, after which all dispersed, feeling that a pleasant and profitable evening had been spent.

Mrs. HARRISON, wife of the president, has proved a disappointment to the W. C. T. U. Union. They say of her that she was known to be indifferent to the matter of total abstinence, but they hoped she would set the example at her own table. Mrs. Cleveland though a much younger woman, and more likely to be influenced by her husband, never tasted wine at any time, and at the state and other formal dinners no glasses were ever put at her plate. Mrs. Harrison ignores the acts of her predecessors, Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Cleveland, and is therefore condemned by the members of this great body of women.

Johnnie.

It rained dimly. Johnnie had been in the house all the morning. He was a bright boy of seven, full of life and energy, and very fond of outdoor sports; but his mother was afraid to let him go out in the rain, and he amused himself indoors for a time quietly, and then he began to be restless.

"Johnnie, don't," said his mamma, as he began to drum louder and louder on the window-pane. Johnnie became quiet.

"Johnnie, don't," said his mamma, as he vociferously imitated the locomotive, ending in a shrill whistle. Johnnie subsided.

"Johnnie, don't," said his mamma, as he got the pet dog barking with all his might, and Johnnie let the dog alone.

The boy went from one thing to another, and every time he began to find interest in his new occupation, his mother's "Johnnie, don't," sent him off to something else.

If he had been sent out during the morning on a series of errands, protected by overcoat, waterproof, and rubbers, it would have done him no harm, but a deal of good. If he had been set to splitting kindling, or making something with saw and hammer and nails, that would have used up some spare force. Cutting out pictures might have occupied him, or helping his mother in making cake, or modeling in clay, or stringing buttons, or sewing patchwork. Johnnie felt nagged. If his mother would have said, "Johnnie, do this or that," but she only said, "Johnnie, don't."

A Debt to the Children.

"I shall never forget," said a still living English author lately, "the joyous laugh with which my mother would summon us sometimes. 'Come, children, we have nothing but bread and cheese and kisses for breakfast to-day!' and the fun and happiness of those scanty meals."

Every mother owes to her children the simple tastes, the happy faith in love, in their fellow-men, and in the good God overhead, which will keep through life on a level above money or lack of it. At any cost, let her give them a happy, careless childhood. No after-trial can take away the health and vitality which that one gift will bring into their own lives.

It is not the poor only who neglect to give their children this wholesome start in life, of unreasoning cheerfulness. In many a splendidly appointed household the struggle of the father to provide riches for them, and of the mother to give them social position and a thorough mental and spiritual culture, leaves not an hour for the songs by the fireside or the stroll into the fields, which count for such rapture to the little ones and are so pregnant of good hereafter.

These baby creditors do not know how to urge their claims, yet something is now lost out of their lives which no future years can restore to them. Shall they be cheated of it?

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.—A Christian merchant, who from being a very poor boy had risen to wealth and renown, was once asked by an intimate friend to what, under God, he attributed his success in life. "To prompt and steady obedience to my parents," was his reply. "In the midst of many bad examples from youth of my own age I was always enabled to yield a ready submission to the will of my father and mother, and I firmly believe that a blessing has, in consequence, rested upon me and all my efforts."
