With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Persererance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

The Coming of the King.

They shall see the King in His beauty All day long we watched and waited, Waited at our darling's side, While her frail bark slowly drifted Out upon a shoreless tide. We had wept in bitter anguish, We had prayed with burning tears,

While our hearts drew back affrighted, Looking down the lonesome years, All in vain our tears and pleading, All in vain our sorrowing; We could only watch and listen For the coming of the King.

Oh, the terror of the coming Of the grim and ghastly foe! Oh, the darkness of the pathway Where our darling's feet must go! Ob, the glory of the summer-

Bending skies so blue and clear, And the splendor of the roses, And the bird-songs far and near! Must she leave this world of beauty, All the joy our love could bring, And lie down in darksome silence At the coming of the King?

Came He solemnly and slowly As a lord who claims his own, Touched the white hands clasped together, And they grew as cold as stone. uldenly the blue eyes opened, While our hearts grew faint with fear

In their depths in solemn rapture Faith and hope were shining clear. Did she see the golden portals? Hear the songs the blessed sing? 'Perfect peace," she softly murmured, At the coming of the King.

When the days are long and lonely, Summer days most sweet and fair, When we gather in the gloaming 'Round our darling's vacant chair,-Say we softly to each other, -

"Fairer scenes than we can know, Sweeter airs and softer voices, Made our darling glad to go." Shines her happy face upon us, Still a smile is lingering. So in patient trust we tarry

INTERNATIONAL LESSON.

Fourth Quarter-Lesson VII.—Nov. 16. JESUS CONDEMNED.—Luke

13:13-25.GOLDEN TEXT .- For the transgression of my people was he stricken. -Isa. 53:8.

JESUS AGAIN BEFORE PILATE.-Vers. 13.17. When he had called together the chief priests, etc., out side of the Pretorium, because they feared to defile themselves at this holy time by entering into a Gentile nouse. And the people. For the first time, Pilate formerly calls the people into the consultation. He reckons on the numerous adherents of Jesus, would make themselves heard in demanding his release. As one that perverteth the people . . . .

I, having examined him, before you, have found no fault in this man. This confession of Pilate was a conclusive argument for the Jews to consent to the release of Jesus. It was, also, his own condemnation, since he did not release him. No, nor yet Herod. Pilate was not alone in his decision as to the innocence of Jesus. Nothing worthy of death is done unto him. Rev. Ver. hath been done by him. I will therefore chastise him. He hoped that at the sight of this the more moderate would be satisfied. Pilate ought to have said; I will release without any punishment, Scourging. Roman scourging was more severe than Jewish. The number of lashes was not limited to forty. The whips were armed with bones or lead. The criminal was generally bound to a low block, in a stooping posture, and received the blows upon the naked back. Jesus was probably scourged by soldiers appointed by Pilate for the purpose. For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast. It was the custom, and one especially appropriate to the Passover, the festival of deliverance from bondage. Each year some prisoner whom the people desired was released. " CWAHATE A

Just before Pilate gave his final decision, he took water, and washed his hands publicly before the people, thus expressing in symbol what he uttered, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person; see ye to it." But this action and these words in no degree removed the responsibility I shall call on you to recite it. PILATE MAKES ONE MORE EFFORT TO RELEASE JESUS.—John 19:4-15. Jesus, bleeding, scourged, crowned with thorns, and wearing the purple robe, is led out of the court into the presence of the Jews, in hopes that they will think this to be enough to satisfy them. But in vain. The cry is still, "Crucify him." He is taken back into the court, his own clothes put upon him.

JESUS DELIVERED UP TO BE CRUCI-FIED.—Ver. 25. And he released unto them . . . . . him whom they had desired, guilty of the sedition and rebellion with which they charged Jesus, who was innocent of the crimes. Thus Pilate is fallen. His history is a monument of warning to all who yield to evil influences, and sin against God and man and their own consciences.
