Boys Wanted.

Boys of spirit, boys of will, Boys of muscle, brain and power, Fit to cope with everything. These are wanted every hour.

Not the weak and whining drones, Who all troubles magnify: Not the watchword of "I can't," But the nobler one, "I'll try."

Do whate'er you have to do With a true and earnest zeal; Bend your sinews to the task, "Put your shoulder to the wheel."

Though your duty may be hard, Look not on it as an ill; If it be an honest task. Do it with an honest will.

In the workshop, on the farm, At the desk, where'er you be, From your future efforts, boys, Comes a nation's destiny.

Two Little Home Missionaries.

Mrs. Allen had a sorrowful look on her face that morning. I do not think she had any particular trouble. think she was only tired and discourag- of blessad quiet. ed. There was a great deal of work to do in the Allen household-meals | for a few minutes," thought the mother to cook, sweeping, washing, ironing, scrubbing to de, and a baby to take "poor people," but it took a good deal of money "to keep the pot boiling," as the saying is; and Mrs. Allen felt that she could not afford to hire a servant.

There had been a talk in Sundayschool, the day before, about missionaries, and Mrs. Allen's two little daughters, Netty and Helen, had listened carefully to all that was said. The teacher told the class all the particulars about the sailing and the destination of Miss More, who had just gone as missionary to Turkey. Miss More had grown up in the neighborhood where the Allens lived, and Netty and Ellen had known her ever since they could remember. When they were little tots she had taught of Jesus.
