ill? He said he was not; but he talked very little, and he often sighed. His mother thought something was the matter with him, but she did not say much to him about it. At night he took leave of his dear mother and went bed. About an hour after he had been in bed, the maid went to her ustruction or practice.

Very often you hear people exclaim: "Ugh! if this boat were to upset, I'd drown, of course. I can't swim you

Yes, but you can tread water. Most of us attach a wrong significance to the word "swim." Why should we mean one thing when a man swims, and another or different thing when a dog swims? The dog cannot "swim" as man swims, but any man can swim "dog fashion" instantly and for the first time. The animal has no advantage in any way in water over man, and yet the man drowns while the animal farm was soon progressing finely. "swims." The dog, horse, cow, and even the cat all take to the water, and are able to walk as they do when out of water. Throw a dog into the water and at once he begins to walk, just as he does on dry land. Why should a under like circumstances?

It seems strange that people have to be told to do what the animals do instinctively and instantly. Man's ignorance of so simple a thing as treading water is remarkable; it is without reason or excuse. There is a popular notion affoat that in some way the dog has an advantage over man in water. Nothing could be further from the truth. The advantage lies with man, who is provided with a paddle-formed hand, and knows enough to float when tired-something the animal rarely or

Next to treading water, floating on the back is the easiest thing to do in water. This consists in lying flat on the back, head thrown well back, lungs inflated, the limbs extended but flexible, the arms held close to the ears, the hands over the head. The majority of people able to sustain themselves in the water prefer to float in a hori- then easily caught with a slip-noose of zontal position rather than in a perpendicular manner. Both positions are taken to the house, and thrown are much better, in fact much safer, into a caldron to render out the oil, than the attitude that we assume in which is put into heavy bottles, and ciety. swimming. I have found it so. One shipped to wholesale druggists all over day, in a rough serf, I was nearly strangled with a sudden swallow of water, and had I not been able to float the result might have been disastrous. -Harper's Young People.

If I Were a Girl.

I would take care of my health by living out-doors as much as possible, and taking long walks in the sunshine. English girls understand how necessary this is for good complexions and cheerful spirits. Wear simple clothing that you may climb mountains and breath freely.

I would secure the best education. Go to college by all means, if it is possible. Read good books, and thereby become intelligent.

I would cultivate cheerfulness. Discontent soon shows itself in the face. If you have some disappointments, so do others. If you are cramped for money, be thankful that your lot is no worse than it is. Learn to make the best of things. An unhappy woman is a perpetual cloud in a home. A fretful girl has few friends, and the number lessens year by year.

I would say kind things of others, especially of the girls. A girl who makes unkind remarks about other girls would better be avoided by young men. She will not make an agreeable companion for life.

I would learn how to be self-supporting. Especially in this country, where fortunes change, it is wise for a woman to be able to care for herself. Helpless women are not a comfort to others, and usually are not to them-

I would try to be polite everywhere. True courtesy is more winning than a pretty face or fine dress. Loud talk or loud dress does not betoken the lady. Be appreciative and sympathetic, and you have two keys which will unlock almost all hearts.

an tread water, and so keep afloat for I would learn self-control. To know when to speak and when to be silent, to have hateful things said about you and to be able to answer pleasantly, to have people confide in you and be wise enough to keep it locked in your heart, to be in poverty and not be soured by it, to meet temptation and be strong before it, to be strong enough to perform any labor or duty that needs to be done-all this shows a noble mastery over self.

I would be punctual. Being late at meals, late at church, or late in meeting engagements makes unnecessary friction in families. If we are willing to lose valuable time, we have no right to make others lose it.

The golden rule of doing unto others as we would they should do unto us is especially applicable here.-Mrs. Jenness Miller.

and, as he had the good fortune to live | Mr. Spurgeon's Advice to among mountains where rattlesnakes were plentiful, he concluded to try the experiment of a rattlesnake farm.

Instead of clearing away the rocks from the side of the hill on which he had taken up his abode, he gathered more, until he had made a regular snake grotto, with plenty of snakes in it, and everything that snakes could desire for a residence. Catching the reptiles and introducing them to their new quarters was mere child's play for so experienced a hand, and the queer

But as the hunter did not wish to receive calls from his wriggling tenants he took care to build his own dwelling very substantially of stone, and cemented it both inside and out before he stocked the farm. No snake could man, woman or child act differently get in very easily, even had it been disposed to leave the charming quarters so carefully provided for it; and this feeling of security was a great help to the courageous man in managing his colony. Day after day he brought home fresh recruits until the assemblage had reached the respectable number of ten thousand or so; and every year about two thousand are killed for the sake of their oil, which is used in making liniments. It seems strange, indeed, that any healing property should be found in one of the most venomous of reptiles.

Rattlesnakes, like bears, go into winter quarters for a long sleep; and in the autumn they are always in their best and fattest condition. This is the season, therefore, when they yield the most oil, and it is known as "killingtime" on Rattlesnake Farm. The snakes come daily to be fed in a cleared spot, like domestic animals, and are wire. After being despatched, they the country.—Harper's Young People.

Every Day a Little.

Every day a little knowledge. One fact in a day. How small is one fact Only one. Ten years pass by. Three thousand six hundred and fifty facts are not a small thing.

Every day a little self-denial. The thing that is difficult to do to-day will be an easy thing to do three hundred and sixty days hence, if each day it shall have been repeated. What power of self mastery shall he enjoy who, looking to God for grace, seeks every day to practice the grace he prays for.

Every day a little helpfulness. We living be in any sense true living. It is not in the great deeds of philanthropy that the only blessing is found. ed every day, we find true happiness. At home, at school, in the street, in the neighbor's house, in the play-every day for usefulness. Every day a little look into the Boys.

When I was just fifteen I believed in the Lord Jesus, was baptized, and joined the Church of Christ. This is twenty-five years ago, and I have never been sorry for what I then did no, not even once.

I have had plenty of time to think it over, and many temptations to try some other course, and if I had found out that I had been deceived or had made a gross blunder, I would have made a change before now, and would do my best to prevent others from falling into the same delusion.

I tell you, boys, the day I gave myself up to the Lord Jesus, to be his servant, was the very best day of my life. Then I began to be safe and happy; then I found out the secret of living, and had a worthy object for life's exertions and an unfailing comfort for life's troubles.

Because I wish every boy to have a bright eye, a light head, a joyful heart, and overflowing spirits, I plead with him to consider whether he will not fellow my example; for I speak from experience.

If you do the best you know you will soon know the best to do.
