jumped overboard while the vessel was being towed out to sea. Michael Coholan, who was working on the ballast wharf, observed the occurrence, and producing a boat rowed out to the spot with another man, and endeavored to get the jumper in. This however they were unable to do. The man was heavy, and it was only when the Daly brothers rowed up, that he was got into their boat. He was afterwards taken back to the Arklow.

Tuesday, the 30th ult., James Brayley, with his seven-year old son sailed from his home, Whitehead island, Grand Manan, in his skiff boat bound to Woodward's cove. On arrival there he took on board some empty oil barrels and sailed for home about five o'clock in the afternoon. The skiff was last seen off Cheeney's island about sundown, but shortly afterwards was hidden by the fog, since which time nothing has been seen or heard of them. It is feared that the boat has founderby St. John fish merchants.
