Troubles growing out of the fighting between the French and Italian workmen at Argues-Mortees, France, threaten to involve international complications. Riots directed against Frenchmen have occurred in many provincial towns. The most serious outbreak occurred here recently when an attempt was made by a mob to burn the French Embassy. The authorities, however, had a strong force of troops about the building and the mob was dispersed after a fierce struggle. Many rioters were wounded by sabres in the hands of the soldiers. The troops were also called out to quell rioting in provincial towns.

Neal Dow at Ninety.

Often reference is made to Mr. Gladstone's amazing vigor. The London papers are discussing the question whether he is immortal. Seeming a little tired the other evening, his physician, Sir Andrew Clarke, proposed a walk to refresh him after the strain of parliamentary work. As soon as Mr. Gladstone took a full breath of outdoor air, he said, "Why not make it a run" and started off at a very rapid pace.

We need not, however, look across the Atlantic. There is a man here who was a smart boy before Mr. Gladstone was born, who at the age of ninety goes to the Prohibition convention and exhibits "the vivacity and gayety of nineteen." The Christian Advocate gave a description of him when he was eighty-five. He seems as vigorous as ever. The Sun, referring to it, calls attention to his services to his country as a general when he was sixty-five, and says:

Although of Quaker blood, he has always been a fighter, and his services in the war were only an incident in a life of soldiering. Extreme in opinion, strong of speech, he has been in motion and activity constantly, and has taken labor like an exercise. Some persons live an inert and cabbage-like existence to extreme old age; the oil lasts long because the wick uses so little. General Dow has always been in the thick of things; and it agrees with him.

Temperance habits and useful activity are the two methods of keeping off old age, or, to be accurate, of avoiding the mental and physical infirmities of old age; for there has been no way discovered of enjoying "long life" without "growing old."

THE GRODER DYSPEPSIA CURE CO.

GENTLEMEN:—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headache most all my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse until during the past seven or eight years I have not been able to take a drink of cold water or milk, as they would produce severe pains and sometimes vomiting. I have been subject to severe pains in the chest, with dizziness, which have been more frequent during the past three or four years. My mouth was furrowed up in the mornings, accompanied with bad breath. My case was yearly growing worse.

During all this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical practitioners, but without producing any improvement.

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it and now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is as sweet as a baby's. In short, your medicine has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspeptics can be cured by its use.
