INTERNATIONAL LESSON.

First Quarter-Lesson VIII. - May 21.

AGAINST INTEMPERANCE -Prov. 23:29-35.

GOLDEN TEXT. - Wine is a mocker strong drink is raging: and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. -Prov. 20:1. THE BROAD ROAD AND THE long roll of names there would be, heart should rise up and give answer at the call of this lesson? Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? The woes are too great and too many to name separately. They are woes of body and woes of mind; woes in himself, woes in his family; pains, diseases, poverty. Who hath contentions? may mean the conflict between desire and conscience, more probably, quarrels and bickerings. Strong drink inflames the passions, and removes the restraint of conscience and will, it first maddens, and then unchains the tiger. From many a gallows, where the condemned murderer stood, has the whole sad wreck of life been summed up in the awful warning, "Rum did it." Who hath complaining? Refers to the tendency of strong drink to foolish talking, vile conversations, shouting, and noisy demonstrations, which are common in drunkenness. The drunkard's tongue "is set on fire of bell." Nothing goes right with the drinker. He complains of God, he complains of society, he complains of his family, of his circumstances, of everything. Who hath wounds without cause? Wounds received in causeless disputes, such as come of the brawls of drunken men. Without cause. Upon very slight prohath redness of eyes? The word does not refer to the reddening, but the dimming of the eyes, and of the power of vision.

The Burden of Woes. As Bunyan's Pilgrim is represented in the earlier portion of his journey as always carrying upon his back a huge bundle of sins, so each travel soul. The saloon darkens the famiplans, undermines houses, lowers personal standing, debauches politics. Like the unclean spirit, the names

How powerfully Shakespeare Cassio, an honest, kind-hearted man, who allowed himself occasionally to be overcome with wine, when he says to Othello: 'Reputation, reputation, reputation! The Koran has truly said, 'There is a devil in every berry of the grape."

As Robert Hall said: "Call things by their right names. A glass of brandy and water; that is the current, but not an appropriate name: ask for a glass of liquid fire and distilled damnation." It is the bottomless pit of society, yawning to swallow up everything of moral worth.

WHENCE THESE TRAVELLERS CAME. -Ver. 30. They that tarry long at the wine. The tendency of strong drink is to continue drinking. They that go to seek out mixed wine. They go to the place of revelry. Mixed wine signifies spiced, drugged, medicated wine, the intoxicating power of which is increased by the infusion of drugs and spices.

The chemical analysis of the liquors used by the people in this country shows that they drink alcohol, arsenic, alum, aloes, bitter almonds, blood, chalk, cherry-laurel water, cocculus-indicus, copperas, gypsum, henbane, isinglass, lime, lead, logwood, nux vomica, opium, turpentine, tobacco, sugar of lead,
