The Pope

The meddlesome Pope probably does If you are free from indigestion you more harm in European affairs than ship of the Romish Church. In this Catholicism differs from Protestant denominations. Protestants may hold themselves answerable to God, and reright, but they acknowledge allegiance to no man outside of the nation in which they live. A Catholic, is, in theory, and many of them are in practice, loyal to the Pope, and the Pope claims emporal power and seeks to interfere in national affairs. Hence, in every nation in Europethe Pope can, through the bishops and priests, swing a good many votes from one party to another. It is needless to say that he cares little for the welfare of any European State, and that the votes are thrown in the way that will best aid Romanism. Direct instances of bargain and sale of A fearful thunder storm passed over | Catholic votes are not uncommon; the representatives of the Pope agree to support certain measures, in return for be hoped that some agreement will be street separate school and instantly is one of the reasons why it is so difficult for evangelical Churches to make headway in Catholic countries.
