

soon see him! And, dear friend, when I get to heaven the first thing I'll do will be to go before the great white throne, bow before the Saviour and lay my crown down at his feet ; and then I'll ask him to let me go and stand at the gate of heaven, where I'll watch for your coming , and when you come, I'll take your hand, and lead you before the throne, and I'll say : 'Dear Jesus, here is the missionary who was willing to leave home and friends to tell a poor heathen girl like me of a Saviour. Place a very bright crown upon her head, and then we'll spend all eternity together in love and praise.' And thus she died in joy. Shall not all God's children be so self-sacrificing with their money, talents, prayers, work and lives, that redeemed souls will be waiting and watching for them at the beautiful gate ?

Zenana Work.

The eighteenth report of the English Zenana Society tells something of what English women are doing for their sisters in India. There are now under its care 36 missionaries, 6 of whom have a full medical qualification and under their superintendence is a staff of native women workers numbering 158. The ordinary income of the mission has now reached £6,013. The Zenana Mission Quarterly has now reached a circulation of upwards of 20,000.

IT DIES YOUNG.

The Christianity that is too good to use at the ballot box is like good boys of certain old Sunday school books that always died young.—Baptist.

A BLUNDER.

That preacher makes a big blunder who lowers the standard of service to a small audience or a stormy Sunday. Let the word go out, "Our natural ways does his best on a rainy day" and see what comes of it.—C. Register.
