SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.

That which lays a man open to an enemy, and which strips him of a friend, equally attacks him in all those interests that are capable of being weakened by the one and supported by the other.

The divinest attribute in the heart of man is love; and the mightiest, because the most human, principle in the heart of man is faith. Love is heaven; faith is that which appropriates heaven.

We are wanting the strength we need for the discovery of truth as yet unknown, because we do not rest enough in truth that we know. 'Rest in the Lord.' The greatest things are known already.

No bad man is ever brought to repentance by angry words or by bitter scornful reproaches. He fortifies himself against reproof, and hurls back terrible charges in the face of his accuser. Yet, guilty and hardened as he seems, he has a heart in his bosom, and may be melted to tears by a gentle voice. Who so therefore can restrain his disposition to blame and find fault, and can bring himself down to a fallen brother, will soon find a way to better feelings within. Pity and patience are the two keys which unlock the human heart.

Of two graduates from college, one carries out a score of things learned—the luggage of his mind. Another carries the secret how to learn, which is the better part of wisdom and faculties set in order of the Maker's plan. Which will be the master of his place and the master of other men in the flight of after-years, who can doubt?

WORDS OF WISDOM.

He that dies pays all debts.
Use both brain and brawn.
Regimen is better than wisdom.

Poverty is hard, but debt is horrible.
Our deeds determine us, as much as we determine our deed.

Youth is in danger until it learns to look upon debts as furies.

What we call our despair is often only the painful eagerness of unfed hope.

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtue.

The man who minds his own business and constantly attends to it has all his time employed.

Throw away idle hopes; come to thine own aid, if thou carest at all for thyself, while it is in thy power.

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world, since fiction can only please us by its resemblance to it.

Poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. It is hard for an empty bag to stand upright.

Study is the bane of childhood, the ailment of youth, the indulgence of manhood, and the restoration of age.

The chief properties of wisdom are to be mindful of things past, careful of things present, and provident of things to come.

With love, the heart becomes a fair and fertile garden, glowing with sunshine and warm hues, and exhaling sweet odors.

Lasting reputations are a slow growth.
The man who wakes up famous some morning is quite apt to go to bed some night and sleep it all off.

We seldom regret having been too mild, too cautious, or too modest; but we often repent having been too violent, too precipitate, or too proud.

As we are bound not to inflict unnecessary sufferings on animals so we are obliged to avert all that tends to add to the sorrow and trials of our common community.

That which we acquire with the most difficulty, we retain the longest; as those who have earned a fortune are usually more careful of it than those who have inherited one.

To divert at any time a troublesome fancy, run to thy books. They presently fix thee to them, and drive dull care from thy thoughts. They always meet thee with the same kindness.

If the forces of evil are marshalling, so are the children of God. If the perils seem threatening, the promises, even of the present, are portentous of coming good. It is well that we should be forewarned, that we may be fore-armed, but let us not forget that God is not dead, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail.

Censure and criticism never hurt anybody. If false, they cannot harm you, unless you are wanting in character; and, if true, they show a man his weak points, and forewarn him against failure and trouble.

Ladies' Column.

MISS DILLY DALLY.

She is a sort of omnipresent damsel, common to all communities, and on famously visiting terms with all the neighborhood—at least, she thinks so. She always runs into your house in great haste as though her wish was to borrow fire, instead of telling you (in a voice lowered in terrorized accents) that your neighbors on the other side of her have just closed a loving tussle to remove superfluous tresses from each other's devoted heads. Indeed, our lingering informant draws on her imagination so strongly in depicting the manipulation of jet and cardinal locks, that we see forthwith a mental picture of the angelic book-keeper above, with busy pen subtracting handfuls of hair from our neighbor's record.

She has remained standing during this exciting recital, she being in too much of a hurry to sit down. Now she sinks into a chair and relates other direful happenings, her haste apparently of lesser importance than her chit-chat, and the budget she is generously banqueting you upon. All the time she is going, but doesn't get off. Perhaps Miss Dilly Dally is such a very kind-hearted creature, and seeing the implied entreaty in your face for just one more of her stories, she cannot deny you her society all at once, so she breaks the shock of her departure by frequently reiterated warnings of 'Well, really, I must go.'

But she doesn't. She settles back and aimlessly talks for ten more minutes, though the washer-woman may be waiting for her wages, with a sick family at home needing her immediate presence; or she may be cheating you out of other duties which you are anxious to discharge; but courtesy keeps you there giving ear to Miss Dilly Dally's gaseonading and idle gossip.

Finally, this creature of a most tiresome habit will arise; but still she tarries, standing in various unbecoming attitudes, repeating for the fiftieth time, 'I just run over for a minute,' forgetting she has already slain many golden minutes.

She may get half-way down the hall when she will suddenly brighten up with something she had nearly forgot to say.
Then, in a nervous state, you must listen to what is of no more benefit to you or humanity in general than Hebrew is to Geronimo. Then she hangs on to the door-knob, still talking, as if she held the hend of a long-lost friend and felt loath to part with it. After the door is opened, she issues general and particular invitations to everybody present to call soon, pitching her voice to upper C to reach those who may not have followed her to the door.

She may get so far as the gate, when an after thought, or a last underscore to call soon, strikes our 'going' caller, and you must risk a pneumonia by standing in the chill winds to patiently and politely hear to the end.

Everybody seems relieved after Miss Dilly Dally's departure. She may be ever so nice otherwise, but her prolonged announcements of going detract from her society materially.

Miss Dilly Dally and all others whom it may concern, when you say you must go, put your potential verb into force and go.
Do not dally and have everybody on the qui vive to see you go. Be not offensively short or abrupt, but go, when you say you are going.

Young girls of the present day completely destroy their hair by crimping it with irons and twisting it up tightly with thick hard hairpins. This treatment may make the hair look pretty for the time being, but no thought is given as to the ultimate result and the appearance it will present a few years hence. The hair should be well brushed every night and morning with a moderately hard brush—brushes made with short unbleached bristles are the best—and on retiring to rest the hair should be drawn back lightly over the ears, plaited in one long plait, and allowed to hang down the back; it should not be fastened up with hairpins, nor should any cap or covering be worn on the head. This method makes the hair bright and glossy without the aid of oils or pomades, which are best avoided.
The fewer hairpins and ties used in dressing the hair the better, and twisted hairpins are injurious. It is not well to continue the same style of dressing the hair for too long a period, as that is apt to make it thin in some places; a change is a relief to the head, and otherwise advisable. Cutting the hair occasionally is necessary, and should not be neglected.

The chief characteristic of a girl should be truth. Of all the duties, the love of truth, with faith and constancy in it, ranks first and highest. Truth is God. To love God and to love truth are one and the same. It is this quality more than any other that commands the esteem and respect, and secures the confidence of others.

MANHOOD.

How Lost How Restored.

JUST published, a new edition of Dr. Culliverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhea or incapacity induced by excess or early indiscretion.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of early error may be radically cured pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself chiefly, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hand every youth and every man in the land.
