SIXTEEN BUSINESS MAXIMS.

- 1.—Maintain dignity without the appearance of pride.
- 2.—Persevere against discouragement.
- 3.—Be punctual and methodical in business, and never procrastinate.
- 4.—Keep your temper even where there is great provocation to anger.
- 5.—Preserve self-possession, and do not be talked out of conviction.
- 6.—Never be in a hurry, though judicious haste is often highly commendable.
- 8.—Rise early, and be an economist of time.
- 9.—Manner is something with everybody, and everything with some.
- 10.—Be guarded in discourse, attentive, and slow to speak.
- 11.—Never acquiesce in immoral or pernicious opinions.
- 12.—Be not forward to assign reasons to those who have no right to ask.
- 13.—Think nothing in conduct unimportant or indifferent.
- 14.—Never assume any responsibility inconsistent with duty.
- 15.—Always remember that honesty is not only the best policy, but that it is the only policy consistent with right and honor.
- 16.—In all your transactions remember the final account.

RUNNING INTO DEBT.

So common is the habit of borrowing or getting things on credit, that the average young man thinks no more concernedly of doing it, than if it was a recognized and honorable business privilege. Robert Collyer, in his admirable 'Talks to Young Men,' makes the following wholesome remarks on this subject:

'I know of few things in our life so full of peril to a young man as running into debt. It has done more damage to our finest manhood than any other thing I can think of, except drinking whiskey; and to a good many men there is danger from that, even so long as they stand free from this curse of debt. But a man is driven into the second evil often in trying to forget the first, or to abate its burden. . . . It is not true, as we might imagine, that only those of a poor and shiftless sort drift into debt. . . . The worst of the curse is that it so very often takes our choicest young men captive, and drags them down to this shame—young men of a genuine honesty, so far as good intentions go, when they set out in life. . . . It is like a thread of golden wire so fine they do not see it at first or feel it; but day by day other threads are bound about them, and these twist themselves at last into a cable from which they find it very hard and bitter work to get free. . . . Do not spend money you cannot well spare. If you buy a Bible, even, you cannot afford to buy just then, you wander to where the wires are set, and may do more harm to yourself thereby than the Bible will ever do you good.

I like that word of a sound divine who says that next to the grace of God, paying our debts right along is the best means of grace in the world, to deliver us from a thousand snares. . . . Do not run into debt, then. Save that you may spend. Do what a true man may do, to provide things honest in the sight of all men. Owe no man anything, in this noble way, and then you will make all men your debtors for the sterling and noble example you set to the world about you.'

A NEW PSALM OF DAVID.

There lived in the Highlands some years ago, a minister who was rather slow in paying his debts. On a Saturday night he dispatched his 'man' across the river for a pair of shoes, which he had sent to get mended by David, his shoemaker. There happened to be a spate in the river, and he could not get back till about midday on Sunday. When he appeared, the minister was conducting services in the church. He happened to be preaching about David, and just as Donald made his appearance at the door, the minister said, 'But what did David say? David said, exclaimed Donald, that he will send you the shoes when you send the money to him?'—Tid Bits.

It is good for a man to be checked, crossed, disappointed, made to feel his own ignorance, weakness and folly; made to feel his need of God; to feel that, in spite of all his cunning and self-confidence he is no better off in this world than in a dark forest, unless he has a father in heaven who loves him with an eternal love, and a Holy Spirit in heaven who will give him a right judgment in all things, and a Saviour in heaven who can be touched with the feeling of his infirmities.

MISS ALCOTT'S ADVICE.

Miss Louisa Alcott gives the following advice to girls. It is a whole volume. She says: Girls, don't be in haste to wed. Build up healthy bodies by good food, plenty of exercise and sleep. Then learn all the useful household arts before you attempt to make a home. Cultivate your minds with the best books, that you may be able to teach your children much that school training alone will never give you. Choose your amusements wisely, for youth must have pleasure, but need not waste itself in harmless frivolity. Above all, select your friends with care. Avoid girls who give only for fashion, flirtation, and enjoyment, and use the privilege all women may claim, to decline the acquaintance of young men whose lives will not bear inspection by the innocent eyes of women. Let no delusion of wealth, rank, comeliness, or love tempt you to trust your happiness to such a one. Watch and wait till the true lover comes, even if it be all your life, for single blessedness is far better than doubtful misery and wrong. Spinners are a very useful, happy, independent race, never more so than when all professions are open to them, and honor, fame, and fortune are bravely won by many gifted members of the sisterhood. Set your standard high and live up to it, feeling assured that reward will come here or hereafter, and in the form best suited to your real needs.

WOMEN.

Women are discovering more and more widely what an immense reservoir of energy is the open air. A walk every day, short or long, according to one's strength and time, is a means of grace. It is so easy, especially in winter, when the walking is apt to be bad, to degenerate into a semi-invalid condition by means of want of exercise, and so much time is passed in the bad air of theatres, concerts and lecture rooms, that one loses all spring and elasticity. Yet where there is no actual illness it is quite possible to take one's self in hand, and by hygienic measures begin in twenty-four hours to feel like a new person. To retire at an hour that will permit rising at six; to plunge at once into the bath, finishing with one entirely cold; to exercise briskly with dumb-bells—to do this is to be spurred into a glow of energy and activity that will surprise one who has not tested its efficacy. After this one goes to breakfast with some appetite, and if a walk follows it is quite equal to a cure. Good sleep in pure air is of itself the most wonderful of tonics. Add to this hygienic living wholesome mental application, and few women need suffer from illness. It is not enough to be merely negatively well, one should insist on conditions that give an elasticity and constant flow of energy, and it is perfectly possible to so order one's life as to command these.

THE WOMEN OF BARBADOES.

Mr. Freude says, in his new book, that women dress ill in Barbadoes, for they imitate English ladies; but their ill dress cannot conceal the grace of their forms when they are young. It struck Pere Labat two centuries ago, and time and their supposed sufferings as slaves have made no difference. They are used as beasts of burden to fetch and carry, but they carry their loads on their heads, and thus from childhood have to stand upright, with the neck firm and straight. They do not spoil their shape with stays, or their walk with high-heeled shoes. They plant their feet firmly on the ground. Every movement is elastic and rounded, and the grace of body gives or seems to give, grace also to the eyes and expression. Poor things! it cannot compensate for their color, which now when they are free is harder to bear than when they were slaves. Their prettiness, such as it is, is short-lived. They grow old early, and an old negress is always hideous.

NO LAW TO HER.

A little miss of five, with a good deal of originality and independence in her composition, has a brother-in-law of whom she is very fond. They are great chums, and it is hard to decide whether the little girl or the man is the more mischievous when they begin their romps. She persists in calling him my brother.

Your brother-in-law, corrected a precise lady visitor one day.

He's no law to me, retorted the youngster—a fact so self-evident that it precluded further genealogical explanations.

This is the law of benefits between men: The one ought to forget at once what he has given, and the other never to forget what he has received.

FEAR is a bad habit often formed in childhood and continued in a chronic form during life. It is cured only or mainly by its opposite—courage.

MANHOOD.

How Lost How Restored.

JUST published, a new edition of Dr. Cullverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatorrhoea or incapacity induced by excess or early indiscretion.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of early error may be radically cured pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself chiefly, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hand every youth and every man in the land.

Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of four cents, or two postage stamps. Address.
