ALPHABET OF PROVERBS.

A grain of prudence is worth a pound of craft.
Basters are cousins to liars.
Confession of fault makes half amends.
Denying a fault doubles it.
Envy shooteth at others and woundeth herself.
Foolish fear doubles danger.
God reacheth us good things by our own hands.
He has worked hard who has nothing to do.
It costs more to revenge wrongs than to bear them.
Joy is the price of sorrow.
Knavery is the worst trade.
Learning makes a man fit company for himself.
Modesty is a guard to virtue.
Not to hear conscience is a way to silence it.
One hour to-day is two to-morrow.
Pride goeth before destruction.
Quiet conscience gives quiet sleep.
Richest is he that wants least.
Some faults indulged are little thieves that let in greater.
Trees that bear most hang lowest.
Upright walking is sure walking.
Virtue and happiness are mother and daughter.
Wise men make more opportunities than they find.
You will never lose by doing a good turn.
Zeal without knowledge is fire without light.

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

There never yet was anything which could be proposed, from the most important to the most humble, but, if you were to ask other people about it, you would hear that it was all very well, but really it is not the time. If the originators of all the great movements and improvements which have benefited the race had waited until their friends ceased to say, It is not the time, they would have all gone into the dust without doing those things which have made them immortal. If, for the execution of the humbler designs which rise in the course of our private affairs, we were each to wait till others said it was time, there never would be anything done beyond the limits of the most ordinary routine.

No one can ever plead that he has no time for self-culture, for in his busiest hours he may find abundant means to elevate and improve himself. But to do this he must work honestly, faithfully, and energetically; he must strive for excellence in his department; he must learn to take pleasure in the good he is bestowing as well as in that he is receiving. Toil is the school for high principles. The most fruitful sources of truth and wisdom are experience and observation, and these belong to all conditions. Almost all labor demands intellectual activity, and is best carried on by those who invigorate their minds so that the two interests, toil and self-culture, are friends to each other.

A child who grows up loving good books is saved from many temptations that beset the empty-minded. He can always find a good companion and need never be lonely.

There is no greater mistake than that made by the man who is selfishly seeking any kind of happiness at the expense of others. If he search for it through his whole life, he will never find it. To diminish the welfare of his neighbors will add no mite to his own store. On the contrary happiness increases as it is shared and diminishes as it is selfishly grasped.

Contentment is a good thing until it reaches the point where it sits in the shade and lets the weeds grow.

HE KNOWS WHAT TO SAY.

A leading manufacturing company needed a new superintendent, and myriads of applications were received. One was from a man who stated his early history, and also his late experience, as foreman of shops, giving no references, but repeating the names of a number of people whom he said were acquainted with him, and would, no doubt, answer inquiries if they were addressed to them. But the salient part of the letter was in the simple expression, 'I will come to your works, and let you look me over and make up your mind whether I will do.' The president of the company, on reading the letter, immediately said, 'This is the first application which seems to recognize our position as owners of the property, as the other applicants have all said that they are ready to come and look the works over.' The result of the meeting was that they concluded that the man would do, and moreover, he has done, in a very successful manner, managing the works with a great deal of enterprise and profit to the company.

THE WIFE'S EARNINGS.

When I hear a woman say that her husband gave her ten cents, or that he let her have a quarter—say it without a blush or apparently a thought of her own degradation in being obliged to say so—I feel ashamed for womanhood, and almost discouraged, and wonder sometimes if one so dependent upon another will ever make an independent voter. So ingrained into society is the feeling that a woman is supported by her husband, that women use these terms without thought, and most people re-echo them as thoughtlessly. So few women value their services as they ought, they forget that a housekeeper would receive good wages for the labor she performs, and would not use half the care—would not save nearly so much. Men know that this is so when they stop to think, but habit is so settled with them that few stop to think, and so we hear some of the best men say, 'I'll let you have so much,' as if the money were any more his to let her have than hers to let him have. Too often it is the case that the wife feels obliged to account for every cent spent by her, while her husband spends as he pleases and renders no account to any one, instead of each keeping a strict account of all money which should belong equally to them.

It is well that so many girls and women earn money before marriage nowadays; that helps them to appreciate the value of their labors; but more is needed yet, and I hope the ballot will bring the more—will make women respect their own value, and through their self-respect will come the respect of man.—Alura Collins Hollister, in the Wisconsin Citizen.

HINTS FOR THE PARLOR.

There is no rule for hanging pictures, but they look best if hung on a line level with the eye.

Rugs and hard floors have taken the place of carpets, but there are persons who think a room cold and uninviting unless carpeted.

The gaudy colors and startling patterns that were once fashionable have been superseded by a line of neutral tints that has revolutionized the style of household decorations.

Parlor tables are numerous, but of a light style, artistic and pretty. The tops covered with a scarf or cover of India silk, or some soft silk fabric and of colors to match the walls.

Small designs are much to be preferred to large ones for carpets, and are more economical both in wear and fitting over, but if a large pattern is to be used by all means put it in the largest room.

A fancy for wall hangings is after the old English style of tapestry for which chintz, soft India silk or cretonne may be used, fluted or plain, and caught at the top and bottom with a gilt molding.

This is an era of ribbons, and everything may be tied up with fancy ribbons of the same or different shades. It is, however, desirable to select such colors as will contrast or harmonize with the furnishing of wall, carpets, rugs or pictures. Too many colors cheapen the effect of a room.

An ingenious woman has found out a new trade, or rather a new application of an old one, by which she is able to earn a good income, and at the same time to make herself a blessing to overworked housewives. Feeling that she possessed certain gifts which especially fitted her to adorn the profession of cook in a private house, and realizing at the same time that these gifts were accompanied by a spirited disposition that would not willingly be servile to the whims and foibles of the average mistress, she put into practice the following plan of developing her talent, saving her self respect, and making money. First securing the patronage of half a dozen families, whom woful want of good cooks and a wilful waste of bad ones, had almost driven to desperation, she prepared in her own establishment dainty and attractive meals, sending them to the separate homes three times a day, and charging for them in proportion to the number of members in each family. At latest accounts her clientele had grown to such a degree that she had found it necessary to engage a couple of stout Swedish girls to assist her.

A LOVING FAMILY.

Yes, said the principal of the young ladies' seminary to the proud parent, you ought to be, very happy, my dear sir, to be the father of so large a family, all the members of which appear to be so devoted to one another.

Large family! Devoted? gasped the old gentleman in amazement. What on earth do you mean, ma'am.

Why, yes, indeed, said the principal, beaming through her glasses; no less than 11 of Gussie's brothers have been here this winter to take her out riding, and she tells me she expects the tall one with the blue eyes again to-morrow.
