Young Men's Column.

SUBJECTS FOR THOUGHT.

Do your best, and await calmly the result. It is anxiety, not work, which kills; it is work, not anxiety, which commands success. There is a Hindoo saying that the fortune of a man who sits sits also; it sleeps when he sleeps, moves when he moves, and rises when he rises.

Wisdom consists not in knowing many things, nor even in knowing them thoroughly, but in choosing and following that which conduces the most surely to our lasting happiness and glory.

Life without industry is guilt, and industry without art is brutality; and for the words 'good' and 'wicked' used by men, you may almost substitute the words makers or destroyers.

How easy is the thought, in certain moods, of the loveliest, most unselfish devotion. How hard is the doing of the thought in the face of a thousand unlovely difficulties.

There are truths which some men despise because they have not examined them, and which they will not examine because they dislike them.

The noblest characters are those who have steered the life-vessel through stormiest seas. A bed of down never nurtured a great soldier yet.

Our guides, we pretend, must be sinless—as if those were not often the best teachers who only yesterday got corrected for their mistakes.

The more weakness, the more falsehood; strength goes straight. Every cannon-ball that has in it hollows or holes goes crooked.

There cannot be a more humble soul than a believer. It is no pride in a drowning man to catch hold of a rock.

Better to be despised for too anxious apprehension than ruined by too confident a security.

The poorest education that teaches self-control is better than the best that neglects it.

AN HONEST MAN'S TRIALS.—I do not know, says a humorist why I should always be regarded with suspicion wherever I go.

I do not present the appearance of a man who is steeped in crime, and yet when I put my trivial little two-gallon valise on the seat of a depot waiting-room a big man with a red mustache comes to me and hisses through his clinched teeth; "Take yer baggage off the seat!" It is so everywhere. I apologize for disturbing a ticket agent long enough to sell me a ticket and he tries to jump through a little brass wicket and throttle me. Other men come in and say: "Give me a ticket for Bandoline, O!" and be quick about it, too," and they get their ticket and go aboard the car and get the best seat, while I am begging for the opportunity to buy a seat at full rates and then ride in the wood-box. I believe that common courtesy and decency in America needs protection. Go into an hotel, or a hotel, whichever suits the eye and nyther reader of these lines, and the commercial man who travels for a big sausage-casting house in New York has the bridal chamber, while the minister of the Gospel gets a wall-pocket room with a cot, a slippery-elm towel, a cake of cast-iron soap, a disconnected bell, a view of the laundry, a tin roof and four dollars a day.

WHO SHOULD COMPOSE COMMITTEES.

1.—The man who is willing to take the lead, not the man who has to be dragged.

2.—The man who is willing to endure hardship, not the man who complains of it.

3.—The man who works for results, not the man who seeks attention.

4.—The man who looks at the bright side and magnifies things achieved, and not the man who is cast down by confronting obstacles.

5.—The man who is an inspiration to the discouraged and pluck to the downcast, and not the man who yields to faithless companions.

6.—The man that does not imagine that the committee belongs to him, but with deep humility and faithful service evidences that he belongs to the committee.

7.—Not the man who has a scheme with every breath, but the one who sees the gray dawn of success through the plan, and continuous effort until the hazy morn gives way to noonday splendour.

8.—Not the man who attends the meeting as he does to the work, always late, but the one who says this business is mine and I'll meet it on time.

Not the man who is all blow and show and would have all know his position, but the one who dignifies his position by careful research and introduces plans, and fruit of study and preparation.

Ladies' Column.

Hope is like the sun, which, as we journey toward it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.

TO GIRLS.

The happiness of your life, girls, and its power, and its part and rank in earth or heaven; depends upon the way you pass your days now. They are not to be sad days; far from that. The first duty of young people is to be delighted and delightful; but they are to be in the deepest sense, solemn days. Now therefore, see that no day passes in which you do not make yourself a somewhat better creature.

Whether consciously or not, you must be in many a heart enthroned; there is no putting by the crown. Queens you must be; queens to your lovers; queens to your husbands and sons; queens of higher mystery to the world beyond, which bows itself, and will forever bow, before the crown and the stainless sceptre of womanhood.

TELL YOUR MOTHER.

I wonder how many girls tell their mothers everything! Not those young ladies who, going to and from school, smile, bow, and exchange notes and cards de visites with young men, who make fun of them and their pictures, speaking in a way that would make their cheeks burn with shame if they heard it. All this, most incredulous and romantic young ladies, they will do, although they gaze at your fresh, young faces admiringly, and send or give you charming verses or bouquets. No matter what other girls may do, don't you do it. School-girl flirtation may end disastrously, as many a foolish and wretched young girl can tell you. Do not let the bloom and freshness of your heart be brushed off in silly flirtation. And above all, tell your mother everything. Fun in your dictionary would be indiscretion in hers. It would do harm to look and see. Never be ashamed to tell her, who should be your best friend and confidant, all you think and feel. It is strange that so many young girls will tell every person before mother that which it is most important she should know. It is very sad that indifferent persons should know more about her fair young daughter than she herself. Have no secrets that you would not be willing to trust to your mother. She is your friend, and is ever devoted to your honor and interest. Tell her all.—Fanny Fern.

WOMAN'S WORK AND AIMS.

If the recognition of a woman's right to hold any position for which she has the taste and ability is to be taken as a standard by which to measure a nation's progress, then as a nation we have certainly made great advances during the last quarter of a century. Formerly, housework, teaching and the factory were the only means by which a woman could earn her own living. We have women book-keepers, brokers, journalists, stenographers, typewriters, telegraph and telephone operatives, and a long list of others who to-day are earning good wages in positions that were formerly filled only by men. One of the most successful florists of Boston is a woman. Many of the canning establishments on the Pacific coast are owned and managed by women. The women farmers of the United States are growing more and more numerous every year, especially in the western states and territories; and the number engaged in other out-door occupations has very largely increased during the last ten years. The National Dental College has decided to admit women students to the same courses of study and practice as are offered to men. And surely no one can deny that woman are eminently fitted to succeed in a profession in which gentleness of manners and delicacy of touch are the cardinal qualifications. Miss Wilkinson, of London, is a very successful landscape gardener. She prepares plans for the laying out of recreation and playgrounds for the Public Gardens Association, which are much admired for their beauty and economy, and herself superintends the manual labor. The Woman's Journal tells about Miss J. Stickford, a Louisiana lady, who fills the varied offices of ticket agent, telegraph operator, shipping clerk, express agent and train dispatcher at Prodhomme station on the Texas Pacific railroad, a little above Alexandria. The New Orleans Times-Democrat says that in directing the handling of cotton and other bulky freight, ordering the loading of the cars, etc., which sometimes strains the patience of the most amiable men, Miss Stickford maintains invariable dignity and good temper, and all goes smoothly under her wise and careful supervision. Miss Annie H. Whitney, the proprietor of the Chequasset Dannels at Lancaster, Mass., is said to be at the head of mastiff breeders in this country.

JUST published, a new edition of Dr. Culler's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure of Spermatocoea or incapacity induced by excess or early indiscretion. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of early error may be radically cured pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself chiefly, privately and radically. This lecture should be in the hand of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of four cents, for two postage stamps. Address,
