

THE LATE JOSEPH BULLOCK AND
MRS. BULLOCK.

MR. J. F. BULLOCK

It seems to us as we gather at Beulah for our annual Alliance and Camp Meeting, fitting to offer a tribute in memory of our late Brother Joseph Bullock, whom we miss more than we can express, after having been with us at every meeting for over twenty years, being to us a counsellor and strong supporter in our enterprises, and associated with Sister Bullock and Brother J. F. Bullock, made it possible to build up and beautify, and make Beulah Camp Ground what it is today; not only so, but to also put our missionary work on a good basis by contributions to be invested so as to yield perpetual interest to go into the missionary funds. The words uttered by our departed brother at our meeting last year should be engraved on our memory when he said: "I think I have manifested my confidence in the Reformed Baptists in the money I have advanced for the beautifying and building up of this beautiful place, and I have never asked for a scratch of a pen, nor a cent of interest, nor a dollar of security. You have now paid the amount in fulfilment of my offer, and this beautiful place is yours, and I am glad that you now own it practically free from debt."

Surely an expression of confidence in the Reformed Baptist brethren in such a practical way, by a successful business man should make us stronger and give every man a determination to prove worthy of such a tribute of faithfulness as a people.

Now we want our dear Sister Bullock and Brother J. F. Bullock to feel that we fully appreciate their continued confidence and help in the work. In the past they, associated with our late Brother Bullock, have proven themselves to be "our friends indeed" in their most unselfish devotion to the cause of holiness, in gifts and abundant labors. We trust that the sacred memories of the associations of the past will enrich the blessedness of the Alliance and Camp Meeting of 1915.

QUIET STRENGTH.

"Oh, yes, she's always pleasant," the speaker's commendation held a touch of disparagement very nearly allied to contempt. "She's a sweet, gentle little woman, but with no particular strength of character."

"Now I wonder," questioned a listener thoughtfully, "whether it does take no special strength of character to be always sweet and gentle?"

It was a fair question. There is, of course, a sort of weak amiability that has no opinions of its own and placidly agrees with all that are offered however diverse; that, however, is indolence or imbecility, not sweetness of spirit. But there are many who confound gentleness with weakness, and fail to understand that self-assertion and aggressiveness of manner are not force. Gentleness calls for the very highest type of strength. Habitually to keep the tones ever kind, the manner sweet and pleasant; to remember little courtesies in the daily rush of work, and to be considerate of others even in the hours of stress and pain, calls for a soul that is strong and unselfish. Impatience is weak, and yet it is a very common thing to find those who pride themselves on their forcefulness flying into fretfulness and irritability at every obstacle that bars their path. Only one who has mastered self and holds its moods and tempers in control can have attained to habitual gentleness, and whoever considers that trait a mark of weakness might well experiment along the line of possessing it.—Selected.

The credit for the great beauty of Beulah Camp Ground rightfully belongs to Brother John F. Bullock. He planned the avenues, walks, fountains, the artificial lake, the bridges, the arrangement of the shrubs and flowers. He invented the beautiful sanitary fountain, and the combined lantern and flower stands, the handsome waste boxes; he planned the water supply and sewerage system, and did a large portion of the pipe fitting and other mechanical work himself, showing fine mechanical skill, as well as business efficiency. Brother Bullock contributes largely to the success of the services as an excellent organist and Christian worker.

ANOTHER PROHIBITION NATION.

France, it seems, is to follow the example of Russia and become a prohibition nation. The Petit Parisien says it has been informed that the French government will introduce a bill prohibiting absolutely the manufacture, sale and transportation of all alcoholic drinks during the progress of the war. Even beverages containing a slight proportion of alcohol, it is understood, will be prohibited.

DECEIT.

The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart; his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords. Psa. 55:21.
