renewal for the Highway for another year. Glad tonight for salvation that gives a person joy, that is unspeakable and full of glory, and for the blood that cleanses us from sin and gives us victory. Praise God. Your sister in Christ,

MRS. SIDNEY EARL MORAN. Presque Isle, Me.

Port Maitland, Yar. Co., N. S. Aug. 7, 1922

Dear Highway,—We wish to acknowledge through your columns a very pleasant surprise given us on the evening of the 1st inst. On that evening about thirty of our friends from Sandford walked into the parsonage, taking us wholly unawares, and after spending an hour or two pleasnot before they had left us a practical token of remembrance. We found on the kitchen table, after their departure, goods

To these dear people who so kindly remember us so often during the year we feel grateful indeed. Beloved, if we know how to bestow good things upon one another, how much more doth our Father in Heaven wish to bestow good things the Holy Spirit—upon them that ask Him. Let us ask Him. In Christian love,

L. T. and MRS. SABINE.

Consecration to God and His service must follow salvation, if the soul would retain the grace and favor of Heaven's EXAGGERATION.

The dictionary tells us that a representation of things beyond the truth is exaggeration.

We find this habit prevalent among children as well as young people and older ones, and it seeme to grow with the years in some cases until some would have us think it to be one of the weights Paul speaks of in Hebrews 12:1, but we fear it goes farther and really becomes a "sin which doth so easily beset" a great mass of people.

A story repeated loses nothing in the telling. It may be only an added word here and there and emphasized which gives a different shade of meaning to a story.

We regret that many dear people have to be judged by what they mean rather than by what they say for the saying has to be taken "with a grain of salt."

We do not look for anything better from some of the world. A reporter lives to write up a sensational article with glaring headlines. For instance: a camp meeting ended in a riot; policemen were called, chairs were broken, and many ready to fight, etc. Facts were, a general confusion caused by some acting unwisely, which was greatly regretted. We have read of evangelists reporting their meetings—which, no doubt, were glorious—as having hundreds at the altar and the whole town moved by the wonderful power manifested, when in many cases those men were seeing double. A physician would diagnose their case as quite serious.

Dear ones, these things ought not to be. Dear Bro. Baker, Find enclosed my The world puts a discount upon the Christian who exaggerates, and the Lord expects better things of His children.

> Let us carefully examine ourselves by the light of the Holy Spirit and if we are guilty, let us, too, consider it a seriuos case, and flee to the fountain of cleansing and be liberated from this bondage looking unto Jesus.—I.M.R.

EXTENDING BEULAH CAMP GROUND.

Mr. J. F. Bullock, who has taken much interest in Beulah Camp Ground, and has done much in beautifying it, will put on men at once and extend the work, having the bushes and underbrush removed from the remainder of the Grounds, and extend the avenues and walks, and have a large place fitted for the parking of a large number of automobiles for the convenience of the people who attend the Camp Meetings. Among the other attractive features the new grounds will be a beautiful place for open air services, or overflow meetings. There are beautiful spots on this new part for every additional convenience.—S.A.B.

QUARTERLY MEETING CHANGED.

Rev. J. H. Coy has kindly consented to act as agent for the Highway, as he has opportunities of seeing a number of people while about his duties as colporteur.
