Riverside Camp Meeting has been a grand success from the beginning of our work there.

The people of all Christian denominations for thirty or forty miles around look forward to Riverside Camp Meeting as the great religious event of the year, and we believe it stimulates the spiritual activities of all the churches of this whole region of country.

This Camp Ground is situated near Robinson Station, in the midst of the Aroostook County great potato growing country, on the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad, about two miles from the base of Mars Hill, Me. It is very centrally located, as it is only two miles from Blaine, three miles from Mars Hill Village, five miles from the town of Bridgewater, Me., and near the border line between Maine and New Brunswick. It is also only six miles from Tracy Mills and eight miles from Centreville and two miles from Knoxford villages in N. B. It is very easily reached both by Railway and autos, of which there are hundreds at times present.

For further information write Rev. S. A. Baker, Moncton, N. B., Rev. H. C. Archer, Brown's Flat, N. B., Rev. L. J. Alley, Woodstock, N. B., Committee.
