CHARITY.

From the great love chapter, namely the Thirteenth of First Corinthians, we find love capable of doing the following:

The love here named is perfect love.

Love—"Suffereth long."

Love—"Is kind."

Love—"Envieth not."

Love—"Vaunteth not itself."

Love—"It not puffed up."

Love—"Doth not behave itself unseemly."

Love—"Seeketh not her own."

Love—"Is not provoked." R. V.

Love—"Thinketh no evil."

Love—"Rejoiceth not in iniquity."

Love—"Rejoiceth in the truth."

Love—"Beareth all things."

Love—"Hopeth all things."

Love—"Endureth all things."

Love—"Never faileth."

Love—"Abideth."

Love—"Is greatest."

The solution of the world's woes is in this one word. All the law and the prophets hang upon it. It is included in the greatest command. It will solve the perfect spirituality of the church. It will make every Christian consistent with the Word of the Lord. It will give complete victory over sin. It takes the savage out of humanity and puts in the lamb nature. It will cure the world of caste. It will solve the difficulties between capital and labor. It will furnish money and men to girdle the world with salvation.

It has no prejudice against race or color. It burns and throbs as the result of cleansing the heart from sin by the blood of Jesus.

Love masters every base emotion.

Love conquers unreasonable passion.

Love spreads its wings of charity over false accusation.

Love is never cold, but always hot.

Love charges the enemy to the gates.

Love says, "Never give up."

Love is not a stagnant stream, but a running, singing brook.

Love looks for the stars, not for the stones.

Love walks and is not weary, and flies when it is necessary.

Love wraps the arms of the crucified Saviour around the world.

Love is the heart of God.

Love is John Three Sixteen.

Love binds humanity with divinity.

Love marches to the cross.

Love makes no demand which Christ cannot supply.

Love meets death and conquers.

Love rolls back the stone and leaves an empty sepulchre.

Love conquers time and triumphs through eternity.

Love is the greatest thing in the world, and the greatest thing in heaven.

Love, perfect love is the heritage of every true believer in Jesus Christ. It has in it every potency to conquer sin, death and the grave. Oh that the church of Christ here on earth might know the inexpressible delights of perfect love.—Selected.

INTERCESSORY PRAYER.

A missionary in Africa travelling on tour of duty, came to forks in the road, one branch going around a hill, the other up the hill. Hesitating which to take, he besought the Lord to give him direction. He found himself decidedly disposed to take the road up the hill. Once at the summit he had a clear view of the other path in which he discovered several large lions. Deeply impressed by his escape from certain death, he made a memorandum of the facts and date. Afterwards visiting England, a friend asked him whether he recalled any special deliverance, and he narrated this incident. His friend stated that on one occasion he became distinctly impressed that this missionary brother was in great danger; and at once made him the subject of earnest intercession. So vivid and unusual was the impression that he felt moved to record the date. The two compared their dates and found an exact correspondence.—Missionary World.
