USELESS WITHOUT POWER

The trolley wires as they are strung through our streets on the high poles, are powerless and useless for the purpose for which they have been placed there themselves. The trolley cars will stand motionless under them, but let the electricity from the power-house be turned on and the motorman makes connection, and then how smoothly and swiftly the car moves forward. Like lifeless trolley wires are all forms of worship and attempts of service if we do not have the Spirit of God back of them. Prayer may be wound off in characteristic attitudes and songs may be sung in beautiful melody. These are devoid of the influence and unction of the Spirit. We should see to it, therefore, that whether we worship or work that the power of God's Spirit is with us and we allow that Spirit through the Word, to direct and control us. This will demonstrate the Spirit and power of God working in and through us and assuring us success in our efforts." L. Y. P.

READY FOR SERVICE OR SACRIFICE.

From the trying days of the Civil War in the early sixties comes the following remarkable incident illustrating how God's providence sometimes moves in answer to prayer.

A New Hampshire regiment had been engaged in several successive battles—very bloody and very desperate—and in each engagement had been distinguishing themselves more and more but their successes had been very dearly bought, both in men and officers. Just before the taps, the word came that the fort they had been investing was to be stormed by daybreak the next morning, and they were invited to lead the "forlorn hope." For a time the brain of the colonel fairly reeled with anxiety. The post of honor was the post of danger; but, in view of all circumstances, would it be right, by the acceptance of such a proposition, to involve his already decimated regiment in utter annihilation? He called his long and well tried chaplain into council with him, and asked him what was to be done; and the chaplain advised him to let the men decide it for themselves.

At the colonel's request, he stated to the regiment all the circumstances. Not one in twenty, probably, would be left after the first charge. Scarcely one of the entire number would escape death, except as they were wounded or taken prisoners. No one would be compelled to go, if he did not go with all his heart. "Think it over, men, calmly and deliberately, and come back at twelve o'clock, and let us know your answer." True to the appointed time, they all returned. "All?" said I. "Yes, sir, all, without exception; and all of them ready for service or for sacrifice." "Now," said the chaplain, "go to your tents, and write your letters; settle all your worldly business, and whatever sins you have upon your consciences unconfessed and unforgiven, ask God to forgive them. As usual, I will go with you, and the Lord do with us as seemeth Him good." The hour came; the assault was made; on these noble spirits rushed, into "the imminent deadly breach," right into the jaws of death. But, like Daniel, when he was thrown into the lion's den, it pleased God that the lions' mouths should be shut. Scarcely an hour before, the enemy had secretly evacuated the fort, and the "forlorn hope" entered into possession without the loss of a single man!
