Dear Highway:

Just a line to the readers of the Highway to let them know that I have just about completed my college course and can say with Paul that "I have kept the faith." I praise God today for full salvation.

AN EXPIRING SUNDAY

They are killing our Sunday of long ago,
The good old Sunday we used to know;
The day of quiet when everywhere
The spirit of peace pervaded the air,
And the whole world, wearing its Sunday best,
Sat down by the roadside of life to rest.

They are killing our Sunday, not with a blow,
To end it suddenly, but sure and slow,
As they did the martyrs who suffered shame,
On the wheel and the rack and in the flame.

They are killing our Sunday, and when it is dead,
When the last, last drop of its blood is shed,
And its spirit has gone from the knowledge of men

In their world-weary struggle for pleasure—what then?

—W. J. Lampton, in the New York Sun.

NOT BEAUTIFUL, BUT TRUE

The doctrine of native depravity is one of never failing interest. It has never been understood and the leaders of thought among men have always shown a tendency to flatter human nature and turn away from this doctrine. It confronts us, however, as a stubborn fact, whether we examine the biography of our own inner life, or whether we turn to the Word of God.—Christian Witness.

"The ocean can bear up a huge steamer as easily as a leaf. The earth can carry on its rounds the largest city as easily as the oriole's nest. So God can answer prayers for the greatest good as readily as for the least."

Heart holiness is God's greatest demand, for without it we cannot see him.
