PRESENTATION

A number of the members of the Church and congregation met at the home of the pastor, 80 Weldon street, Moncton, N. B., and spent a pleasant evening in social chat and singing. The weather was very disagreeable preventing some from attending. During the evening, Deacon A. G. Good, on behalf of the Church and Sunday School, read an address, and presented the pastor, Rev. P. J. Trafton, with a sum of money. It was a surprise party alright. The pastor tried to express his thanks, feeling very unworthy of this kindness shown him. Surely, these people show the sacrificial spirit. A nice lunch was furnished by the sisters. After the singing of a hymn and the offering of prayer, the friends retired to their homes. May God's blessing rest upon them one and all.

NOTES

The Editor received the full numbers on the programme of the Watch Night service at Seal Cove. We could not print them all for lack of space, so decided all would be satisfied if we used the one read by the pastor's wife.

Let us lay up some treasures in heaven, by giving to the interests of God's kingdom and not leaving our means to be wasted by our friends.

AN EFFECT OF EVOLUTION

Dr. Alexander Patterson truly says: "If this theory is accepted, we must look for a widespread lapse from all Christian faith, and, as conduct follows belief in all intelligent creatures, we shall see also great moral declension."

"To the ordinary man, the matter appears in this light: If we cannot believe a man's statements, we will not take his advice. If we cannot believe the Bible's narratives, why should we believe its religion? If it is not trustworthy as to facts of this world, why depend upon it as to the other world? If it cannot teach correctly the nature of insects and animals, why should it be able to tell us the nature of God? The common man reasons lightly. The Bible must stand or fall by its reliability all along the line of truth of every kind.—"The Other Side of Evolution."

THE BLESSING OF DARK DAYS

Our Lord is constantly taking us into the dark, that He may tell us things. Into the dark of the shadowed home, where bereavement has drawn the blinds; into the dark of the lonely, desolate life, where some infirmity closes us in from the light and stir of life; into the dark of some crushing sorrow and disappointment.

Then He tells us His secrets, great and wonderful, eternal and infinite; He causes the eye which has become dazzled by the glare of earth to behold the heavenly constellations; and the ear to detect the undertones of His voice, which are often drowned amid the tumult of earth's strident cries.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.—Wesleyan Methodist.

"There is never a trial that comes to you but what is ordered by the loving hand of thy Father. It is sent to thee to prove thy faith, not to try thee. Accept it of His hand as a cherished gem, realizing that when your faith is perfected you shall come forth as gold, made meet to adorn the Kingdom of thy Lord."
