

sorrow, over this sad condition.

In his anguish of heart he classes himself with the people and we hear his pathetic cry, "the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

Faithful servants of God in our day, labour and weep over those who once knew the Lord Jesus by experimental knowledge, but they are now walking hand in hand with the world, having lost their first love; these too are unwilling to humble themselves in true repentance.

Many others, we fear, are carrying on a profession, without possessing any real joy in their hearts.

How sad! After every provision has been made through the precious atoning blood of Jesus, for all who will accept, of a free and full salvation, which gives joy and peace in this life, and in the world to come, everlasting life.

Oh! For more real intercessors, to beseech the throne in behalf of the church, (for judgment must begin at the house of God) as well as for the multitudes who have little or no interest in their own soul's welfare.

Each true follower of Christ should realize their responsibilities to their fellow men in these last days, when sin has become exceedingly sinful, and cry mightily to God in intercessory prayer for the salvation of souls. Shall we not all endeavour to do so?
