DISTRICT OUTING

Greetings to Highway readers from the Young People of District Five. On the balmy evening of August 24th, thirty-one young people gathered at Riverside Campground for roasted hot dogs and Christian fellowship around a roaring campfire. Lic. Hazen Ricker led us in an enthusiastic period of song and testimony. The Y. P. S. of Gordonsville and Fort Fairfield took the honors for attendance at this first district Y. P. S. outing. We all left the Campground with the anticipation of soon having another district-wide time of fellowship, feast, and fun. Although we will miss the fellowship of Janet DeLong, Allison Todd, and Howard Cogswell, who have left for college, we are sure that many of our young people will not miss our next outing.

Yours in Christian love,

Marie E. Harding

THE DOPE PROBLEM

Illegal dope traffic has trebled since World War II. At the end of the war, there was one addict to every 10,000 persons in the U. S. In 1955 there was one to every 3,000. Thirteen per cent of all addicts in the country are under twenty-one. Approximately 50 per cent of all crime in U. S. cities, and 25 per cent of all crime in the nation, is attributable to drug addiction.

WHAT JESUS MEANS TO ME

I count it a privilege to tell you what Jesus means to me. Jesus means Saviour. The One Who came to this world to search for lost sinners and to save them.

Surely He sought me when I was lost deep in my sins. I lived a life which was controlled by law and self. I had no Christ control. But thank God he did not leave me to perish in my sins. He lifted me from a life of sin to a life of victory in Jesus Christ.

His Word says in Matthew 1:21: "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins." Well, friends, my tongue cannot express the love that TRANSFUSION!!

A ragamuffin who didn't have the slightest idea of what "transfusion" meant was told that only a transfusion would save the life of a pal. So the boy went to the doctor's office, rolled up his sleeve when instructed, and lay quietly upon the table. After a time he looked up at the doctor and said, "Doctor, when do I die?" The doctor smiled reassuringly. It was then that the lad learned for the first time that a blood transfusion was not another word for the kind of death necessary to assure the life of his friend.

A TRUE SCIENTIST

The scientist, Michael Faraday, concluded a successful lecture to a distinguished London audience. When the enthusiastic applause had subsided, the Prince of Wales proposed a motion of congratulation. This was seconded, and the motion was carried amid thunderous cheers. The uproar was followed, however, by a strange silence. The crowd waited anxiously for Faraday's reply, but he had vanished. He was later located at a little meeting house nearby where he served as an elder. The lecture had been concluded in time for him to attend, as was his custom, the midweek service.—J. Calvert Cariss.
