

FROM REV. AND MRS. W. MORGAN

Dear Highway Friends:

We have just returned from a blessed week-end missionary conference in Vryheid. Our complete staff was able to be present with the exception of the Kiersteads in Rhodesia. It was a special joy to have the Charles Sanders family back in our midst.

We were thrilled to hear the recording of the Beulah broadcast which was sent out by the Sanders. From the ringing of the Tabernacle bell to the singing of Beulah Land at the close one could almost imagine he was at Beulah so real did it all seem. The familiar voices which sounded so natural almost made us feel we were right in your midst. We felt proud to be associated with a group providing such a superb broadcast. The singing, solos, trios, quartettes and choirs were wonderful. Thanks so very much for sending those recordings.

The greetings sent from you folk in the homeland by the Sanders, and their high praises of the spirit of interest and sacrifice among our people at home made us feel to throw ourselves more fully than ever into the work. We want our spirit of ardour and sacrifice out here to be worthy of that at home.

We do feel to praise the Lord for all He is doing for us in our own hearts and in the work. God is working in our midst and we are seeing a few souls seeking God for which we praise Him though we desire many more. There are other ways also in which we see God working of which I want to write you more fully soon.

Our first graduation exercises will be coming up in the near future and we ask your prayers that God may set His stamp of blessing on that event to the end that the graduates may leave the Bible School sensing a great obligation toward their nation in bringing many into the light of the Gospel of Christ.

Yours in His wondrous love
Bill and Elsie Morgan.

AFRICAN BIBLE SCHOOL CLOSING

By Charles D. Sanders

Two weeks ago it was my privilege to attend the closing exercises of our Holiness Bible School at Louwsburg. Before I left Canada, Brother Morgan invited me to be special speaker at the meetings that were to be conducted at this time. It is only a little over two years since this Bible School was first opened. Now I have seen the result of two years of devoted teaching and hard studying; and I was not disappointed.

The whole programme gave evidence of careful planning. In spite of misty and rainy weather, the interest in this occasion was good and the attendance better than we expected.

Of course the climax came when, with teachers and graduating class all dressed in appropriate black gowns, Brother Kierstead, our Superintendent, presented the diplomas. There were four second year students, who formed the graduating class, and three first year students, who also received diplomas for the work done.

It was interesting to listen to the testimonies of the students as they told of the self-denials that they had to endure to make this Bible course possible to them. How much they appreciated their better preparation to undertake the great task of preaching the Gospel to their own people.

It was touching to listen to Brother Morgan, Principal of the Bible School, as he bade farewell to these students who would not be coming back. During the two years there had grown up a mutual understanding and deep Christian love. What a high privilege Brother and Sister Morgan and the native teachers have enjoyed in helping to mold these future Gospel messengers. But I also know a little of what it had cost the teaching staff to train these students.

As I think of the others who have contributed to make this Bible School possible, I find that the list of names is a long one. The foundations for this new venture were laid in the distant past. The church in the homeland, as well as our African church, may be proud of this good beginning. Every person who has given time, or money, to help carry it on may have joy in knowing that a few more Africans have received valuable training to go and win others to Christ. What greater investment could any one make of time, or money, than to help prepare soul winners? One of our greatest needs today, on the African field, is more Spirit-filled national workers.

But as I turn my thoughts from this local scene to the great, whited harvest field, I am reminded that there exists a great challenge and opportunity. The need of our day seems so great that one is apt to think that there is no use in trying to meet it. Would it be possible to make a greater mistake? When we look at our own resources we are convinced that it is an impossible task. But when we look to our God, we are convinced that it can be done. So let us keep our eyes upon Him who has commissioned us to "Go . . . into all the world."

I wish you could have been present to witness this first graduation from our Evangelical Holiness Bible School at Louwsburg.

Yours in Him,

C. D. M. Sanders

THE UNFINISHED TASK

There stands today in one of our larger communities a 10-storey building that has remained unfinished for more than 20 years. Financial difficulties and legal involvements stopped the construction and left the structure as a spectral reminder of an unfinished task.

The church, too, faces an unfinished task, but of a different order. It is the evangelization of the world. Our Lord commissioned his church to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The tragedy of our day is that there are still millions who remain unevangelized.

If we are to receive as authoritative the information available, there are still a thousand tribes who are unreached, and more than 1,700 dialects in which no portion of the Scripture has been translated. We have means of travel and communication that our forefathers never dreamed about, yet only about 35 per cent of the present population of the world has been evangelized.

Surely we must quicken our pace and find a way to multiply our efforts if we are to reach any sizeable proportion of the unchurched population of the earth.

Unless we have been among those who live in non-Christian lands, it is difficult for us to imagine the contrast between those lands and our own. America is a highly favored country, and going from this to many other parts of the world is like stepping from daylight into darkness. In matters of education, public health, sanitation, roads, modern conveniences, hospitals, and even food, the contrast is too great to be imagined. Multiplied millions never have known what it is to have a full stomach and never
