

Bill and Elsie Morgan will be available for missionary meetings and conventions during August, September, and October. They are tentatively scheduled to return to the mission field early in November. Pastors and churches would get a real boost for the year's missionary programme by having this couple with them. Brother Morgan's present address is Beulah Camp, Brown's Flats, N. B.

Rev. J. A. Owens received two candidates into the membership of our Victoria, N. B., church recently.

Rev. H. C. Mullen is conducting prayer meeting and Sunday services at Beulah Camp during the month of August.

Rev. R. H. Nicholson and Song Evangelist Paul D. Mullen were co-workers in a tent meeting at Digby, N. S., July 22nd-August 2nd. Sorry we didn't have an announcement of this campaign in the last Highway.

Rev. M. W. Bagley and the church at Amherst, N. S., are planning a building programme. A lot has been purchased and work on a new church building will begin in the near future.

Don't forget to pray for Riverside Camp Meeting . . .

THE SALVATION OF CHILDREN

God to get them out of trouble and to save ourselves from embarrassment.

John G. Paton, the famous missionary, testified many times to the lifelong influence of his father's prayers. W. T. Stead wrote, "I fail to find that modern society has any substitute for the social benefits which result from this old institution of the family altar." When our children in the tender years of life profess to have found the Lord Jesus Christ, let us water the seed of truth in their hearts by much prayer and by a holy example.

We cannot escape the fact that the life and conduct of each parent is largely reflected in their children. If these young converts are not doing as well as they ought in their new-found hope, the strong probability is that the Christian profession of the parents is not making much of an impression. My sympathies go out to those children whose parents make no effort to help them in the Christian way after they have once found it. The times in which we find ourselves are perilous, and we cannot take too much care to fortify our children against the ever-increasing forces of evil to be found in every walk of life into which our children will enter. I am pleading with father and mother to believe in the genuineness of a Christian experience in the heart of their child.

There are some fine stories told of the children of Scotch Covenanters. Many of these brave Scotch people met death at the hands of their enemies because of their faith in God, and even the children were true under great persecution. A number of children were surrounded by the soldiers of King George and were commanded to tell where their parents were hidden or be shot to death. In spite of the soldiers' cruel threats not one lad or lassie would tell the secret. As they were gathered under a tree, the fierce officer commanding the soldiers, sought to frighten them.

"If you do not tell me quickly you will be shot," the officer roared. They only huddled the closer and kept silent. "Make them all kneel and cover their faces," ordered the captain. One little lassie asked to be allowed to hold her brother's hand, for she thought he would face death easier. All knelt save one bonnie lad who remained standing. "I've done naething wrang: I'll no kneel doon; I'll dee stanin' up," he said in his Scotch brogue. The rifles were ordered loaded only with powder, but the order was given to fire. As the loud report rang through the valley, the children cried pitifully; and some fell to the ground in their fright, but others remained kneeling. "You have not prayed," sneered the officer. "Please sir, ma mither taught me a Psalm; we'll sing that if it will do," said a little girl. All the children stood and tears ran down the soldiers' faces as the children's voices rang out, "The Lord's my shepherd, I'll not want." The officer himself had learned that Psalm also at his mother's knee. Before the song was finished the soldiers hurried away and left the children in peace.

Does not this incident show how little children can love God and be true to Him even in the face of the threat or death? God help us to believe in the reality of a work of grace in their hearts.
