THINGS ABOVE

Paul, in writing to the Colossian church, encouraged them to, "Set their affection on things above" (Col. 3:2). In the previous verse he declares that "Christ is above" sitting on the right hand of God. The connection is simple. Seek Christ and the things pertaining to His kingdom.

Every person who is a child of God must "love heavenly things. He will study heavenly things; and let his heart be enraptured by them.

We who live in this world are often taken up with things of this life which are temporal. There is a sense in which we have nearsightedness. Things of this life occupy our minds so that we see things near at hand rather than broadening our horizon to include the spiritual side of our existence.

To be spiritual one must continually keep his mind on heavenly things. The meaning of Paul's words in Col. 3:2 is that we not only set our minds on heavenly things; but that we keep on doing it continually. One writer expresses it like this; "practice occupying your mind with things above". It is this habitual practising of spiritual things which makes us strong spiritually.

Christians may allow the shadows of daily life to take possession of them. God wants us to look beyond the circumstances of life and search for things which will add strength to our Christian lives. This seeking for things above gives Christians a deep sense of security. This security comes because one feels he is doing the will of God. The darkness of this earth is illuminated when we seek for heavenly things, because our lives are "hid with Christ in God".

IS REPRESSION SANCTIFICATION?

Cooking down and repressing indwelling sin is not the process of cleansing the heart. "Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow" (Ps. 51:7). Repression is not washing. The inward impurities repressed in regeneration are removed by entire sanctification.

OBEDIENCE

An officer who had received his orders from the Duke of Wellington, urged the impossibility of executing them. Wellington replied, "I did not ask your opinion; I gave your my orders, and expect them to be obeyed." Implicit obedience is required by every soldier of Christ.

Ours not to reason why;
Ours not to make reply,
Ours but to do or die.

THE WITNESS

Dr. Caradine, after writing his experience adds: "Can not God witness to purity of heart as he does to pardon of Sin? Are not his blessings self-interpreting? He that impresses a man to preach, that testifies to a man that he is converted, can he not let a man know when he is sanctified? I knew I was sanctified, just as I knew fifteen years before that I was converted. I knew it not only because of the work itself in my soul, but through the worker. He, the Holy Ghost, bore witness clearly, unmistakably and powerfully to his own work; and, although months have passed since that blessed morning, yet the witness of the Holy Spirit to the work has never left me for a moment.
