RIVERSIDE CAMP

Labor Day was a day of activity at Riverside Camp, Robinson, Maine.

Men with tools and truck worked on the grounds, and hotel for general improvements.

Several ladies worked in hotel, other ladies came with a banquet of good things, a real feast for all.

Public Service was held at night, with Rev. D. E. Pike as speaker.

Thanks for the interest in Riverside Camp.

NOTICE RE 1962 MINUTE BOOKS

The 1962 Minute Books are on their way from the printer. It would help us greatly if churches and individuals who are interested in having copies would place their order now, unless this has already been done. This makes it possible to do all the mailing at one time.

Thanks,

L. K. Mullen

Hand That Rocks the Cradle

"Within the last decade, alcoholism among women has become as great a problem as among men. The number of women alcoholics in the United States may be even larger than men alcoholics . . .

"It is easier for a woman to hide her addiction to alcohol. Her husband must be at his job every day; she can get herself plastered at home.

"Strangely enough, the vast majority of women alcoholics are not skid-row tramps. They are the so-called solid citizens—housewives, mothers, people like your next-door neighbor.

"What alarms the experts is the rapid rise in female alcoholism. During the prohibition era, the ratio of men to women alcoholics was something like twenty-five to one. By the end of World War II, when drinking by both sexes had become a part of the American culture, the ratio had shrunk to seven to one. Today it may be one to one."—Jean Ragan in Denver "Post."

NOVEMBER DAYS

by Alice M. Sterritt

November is a grey month,
One only in the year;
Very little beauty seen,
Everything seems drear.
Must we speak complainingly
Because God planned it so?
Even drear November days
Reveal some cheer, you know.

Dreary days will quickly pass,
And we should remember;
Yuletide is not far away,
Soon 'twill be December!
