ALL FROM PEANUTS

The peanut is rapidly becoming an article of the greatest commercial value. Already it is being used in the production of 145 foods and useful articles.

From the peanut we obtain peanut butter, ten varieties of milk, five kinds of breakfast food, two grades of flour, ice-cream, salad-oil, sauce, metal-polishes, toilet and laundry soaps, oleo-margarine, wood stains, leather dyes, ink, and glycerine.

A teaspoonful of peanuts can be made into a pint of milk, while the nuts make a better lard substitute than does cotton-seed oil. Mixed with wheat flour, peanuts make a palatable and highly nutritious bread; they also make excellent biscuits and cakes.

Strictly speaking, the peanut is not a nut at all; it is what is called a "legume"—akin to the bean and pea. The peanuts grow underground, and the crop is harvested with a plow, there being special machines which clean and bunch the nuts.

PORTAGE VALE

Nov. 9—John Graves, Melvin Graves Hanford Grey and A. H. Esau spent a part of last week in the woods in Albert Co. on a big game hunt. Melvin Graves returned early in the week with a very large moose, with a unique set of antlers, having two quite large boards and one smaller one, with a long spike horn, containing altogether eighteen points. When John and Melvin Graves were returning home Saturday when coming down what is known as the Hubley hill, a few miles from Goshen Corner, when nearing the bottom, which is a steep and dangerous hill, the rear axle of their car broke. Melvin was at the wheel and when the car made its mad rush for the bottom he told his brother to jump and he would try and steer the car around the dangerous curve, but fate was against him the car plunged over and alighted on its wheels, with the driver inside, outside of being shaken up, was not seriously hurt. His brother when jumping from the car received a bad cut on one of his legs. The top of the car and two of the wheels were demolished, and considerable amount of other damage done.

During his four years and four months he made the unique record of only missing one connection with the morning train. Your correspondent thinks this record is hard to beat, when we bear in mind he had to make a drive of about sixteen miles before 9.30 in the morning, and some of those four years had winters that made records for severe cold and deep snow. REAL CAUSE FOR ALARM

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald recently made a little dissertation on Scotsmen.

"The Scotsman is his own worst enemy," he said. "All the jokes at the expense of Scotsmen are invented by Scotsmen. I once employed a parliamentary secretary for the purpose of supplying me with two original jokes against Scotsmen every day of the week."

Mr. MacDonald's real opinion of Scotsmen is contained in his sly reference to the present administration.

"Those of you inclined to be pessimistic," he observed, "fearing that the country will never recover again, have the best reason for believing that, because there are no Scotsmen in the present government."

TRAVELS 500 MILES TO CONSULT DENTIST

Regina—By canoe and train for six days—through swift torrents, punted along by brawny Indian guides, shooting rapids and skirting cataracts, Sister Carrier of the Grey Nuns' Order recently travelled 500 miles to Regina, primarily to see a dentist.

Sister Carrier comes from that inland mission in the cold hinterland of Northern Saskatchewan, Notre Dame of the Sacred Heart, Beauval Mission, five miles west of Lac la Plonge. This is her first peek at civilization in five years.

"I like my mission so much, I would not like to be transferred to another one, unless I am commissioned to go farther north, to work among the Eskimos," Sister Carrier declared. She gave a colorful picture of life in this outpost.

Beauval Mission and that of Ile a la Crosse, are generally recognized as the two most difficult missions in the North. In the spring and fall, the mission often is cut off from all except telegraph communication. No mail comes and none is sent out. If the mission cooks run out of tea or other supplies, members of the community do without. In the summer time only the minimum of travel is attempted on the river, owing to its treacherous rapids. The winter season with its blizzards, and subzero temperature, is the open season for travel and hauling of supplies.

The expense and labor of haulage, Sister Carrier explained, is tremendous, when it is considered that the mission feeds and clothes an average of 100 persons. Considerable food also is raised in the district. The wheat fields are large and thriving, while all kinds of vegetables are grown.

The mission workers have themselves installed an electro plant and steam heating system. They also built their own telegraph line and completed the connections.

The only neighbors are scattered bands of Indians. "They are friendly, and 'fire water' is unknown to them," said Sister Carrier. The country which is heavily timbered, is dotted with lakes and threaded with rivers.

The fur catch, she said, in winter, was usually very good, while the fish catch and wild fruit crop materially added to the food supply.

AUTO TRUTH

One thing to remember while driving an auto is the other driver you are meeting may be as crazy as you.

In Bible times the devil got into the hogs, and that may explain why some drivers keep the middle of the road.

The fool and his money is soon parted. If only nature would arrange a similar alienation of the fool and his car.

A Western poorhouse refused to admit a man because he owned an automobile which is somewhat like a hospital refusing to admit a man because he is sick.

How far do you get on a gallon? That depends on what is in the gallon.

Jones: I hear your wife had an accident with the car.

Smith: Oh, it was nothing serious.

Jones: Any damage?

Smith: Oh, no. Just a little paint scratched off both.

If only the breaks would get tight when the driver does!

SOME NERVE

A hardened motorist ran down a pedestrian.

"Hey, he shouted, 'while you're under, take a look at my brake rods.'"
