He got into some trouble with the United States customs people. A friend in Canada had helped him out, and since then he has given his friends in Canada the benefit of his knowledge of the smuggling game.

Is a street car a vehicle? This moot question, so often raised in court in these days of bootleggers, was put to Judge Joseph H. Barnes, in East Boston District Court on Tuesday, at the hearing of Eva Spivack, of 255 2nd St. Chelsea, charged with illegal transportation and exposing and keeping intoxicating liquors. Judge Barnes held that legally a street car was a vehicle. In consequence of this decision, he imposed a $200 fine on Mrs. Spivack, $100 on each count. She appealed. Patrolman John J. Henneberry, of Station 7, the complainant, told the court that he noticed Mrs. Spivack on a street car last Sunday with a large bag. He said he followed her and finally demanded to know its contents. The custom of American men in shedding their waistcoats during the hot weather is to be tried in London this summer even by the most conservative of dressers. For years it has been the usual thing for an Englishman, at home, almost to be shocked when an American appeared without his vest, but now at last the Londoner has been converted and the waistcoatless suit promises to be popular there during the spring and summer. The London tailor brought about the change through the introduction of the double breasted jacket, the Englishman has now become convinced that, after all, the double-breasted coat fits men of almost every build, and that the waiscoat may be discarded without impairing the general smart appearance and line of the suit.

An Expense or An Investment

This Spring make your outlay for Clothing an Investment, not an Expense.

The cheaply-priced, ready-made garment or the cut price tailored model rarely, if ever, gives the wear and satisfaction you rightfully expect!

At the best these low-priced imitations are short-lived. Such a purchase is truly an expense, for it never looks right while you wear it and the "cost of upkeep" in pressing and repairs will be more than you saved—considerably.

On the other hand, consider our Tailored Garments, made from guaranteed materials (inside and out) by skilled workmen to your own measure.

True, you pay a dollar or two more for them, but the many satisfied customers we serve will tell you that our Tailored Garments are an Investment in longer service and correct appearance. Hundreds of patterns, all the favored models to choose from—and a price to fit every pocket.
