The White Star line is quite prepared to make either Halifax or St. John the western terminus in winter for its vessels, provided that sufficient cargo is offered to enable it to operate a service to the United Kingdom from one or other of those ports economically. This was said Friday by Major P. A. Curry, manager of the White Star line Canadian service. He stated that apart from sentimental and patriotic reasons, the company would rather use Halifax or St. John as its winter terminus for the reason that ships are handled more cheaply there than at Portland, Me., which is at present, the Western terminus for their freighters and a few of the passenger liners. There would be no necessity for their going to Portland if it was possible for them to obtain sufficient cargo at Canadian ports, where they would be willing to remain a number of days so long as they got the cargo.

NEWS OF THE WORLD IN BRIEF

Four colonist cars and one baggage car on a special boat train with immigrants for upper and western Canadian points, left the rails at McLeod's near Campbellton, N. B., about midnight Sunday night. The cause of the accident has not been ascertained as yet, according to officials of the Canadian National Railways, who report that all passengers escaped without injury. In the first colonist car were about forty boys brought to this country by the Salvation Army to go on farms. Two other minor freight derailments are also reported, one of which was caused by a freight train hitting a cow near Bathurst, and the other by track trouble at Derby Junction, N. B.

At Amherst, fifty feet of the roof of the Maritime Winter Fair building crashed in under the weight of snow on Monday. The building was empty at the time. It was estimated that the cost of restoring the roof would be under $2,000. In the meantime 25 men were put to work to clear the remainder of the roof.

Five persons lost their lives when a cloudburst struck the mining village of Coaldale, Pa., on Monday, and sweeping down the narrow valley that bounds Marrowbone Creek. Severe electrical storms accompanied by the heavy rains, were felt in Pike county, late Saturday night, and centred on three hills that almost surround Coaldale, a place of five hundred inhabitants, occupied chiefly by employees of the Edgewater Coal Company.

He was none the worse for the experience. Drifts twelve and fifteen feet high are reported in Westport.
