COMING TO THE IMPERIAL JULY 29-30-31

CAME TO CANADA—MARRIED ANOTHER

How Pa-quali Martino, tiring of his life as a bachelor coal miner at South Wellington, Vancouver Island, entered into correspondence with Salvina Corsoro, of Tonino, Italy, whom he had never seen, and induced her to come to Canada, was revealed in the court at Vancouver, when he brought suit against her for the return of $313 which he says he advanced to her in the belief that she would become his bride.

The young Italian girl, according to Martino, when she arrived in British Columbia in 1923, refused to marry him, and instead wedded John Berardino, a Vancouver hotel proprietor. Martino said he had paid $292 for his alleged fiancée's travelling expenses, as well as advancing her $20 spending money for the trip.

The present Mrs. Berardino defends her actions on the ground that no en-agement existed between her and the plaintiff, the latter having taken a chance on her marrying him.

A Southern negro minister who was given to the use of big words and complicated discourses, was waited upon by the church committee and told that his style of preaching was not all that could be desired. "Don't I argify and spuffy?" inquired the minister. "Yes, you done argify and spuffy," responded a member of the committee, "but yo' don't show wherein."
