UGHTER COMES INTO ITS OWN.

ord Chesterfield did not approve of hter. He considered the sound ctionable, and the accompanying ortions of the face, shocking. He arked with much complacency since he had the full use of his on, no one had heard him laugh. o sensible man living today would e such a boast. For while everyr admts that some forms of laughare objectionable, that people e nuisances of themselves by ing and shrieking, under the pretence of laughter, real laughter is commendable. Man is the only animal that can laugh, and the more sane, wholesome laughter there is in the world, the better for everybody. As a rule the man who never laughs is a disagreeable person to have around. Laughter is music in the ears of most of the world, and the facial contortions that accompany it no longer shock the most sensitive. If Lord Chesterfield came back to earth, he would either have to learn to laugh or lose much of his popularity.

THE WIND IN A FROLIC.

By WILLIAM HOWITT

The wind one morning sprang up from sleep,
Saying, "Now for a frolic! now for a leap!
Now for a madcap galloping chase!
I'll make a commotion in every place!"

So it swept with a bustle right through a great town,
Cracking the signs and scattering down
Shutters; and whisking, with merciless squalls,
Old women's bonnets and gingerbread stalls.
There never was heard a much lustier shout
As the apples and oranges tumbled about;
And the urchins that stand with their thievish eyes
For ever on watch, ran off each with a prize.

Then away to the field it went blustering and humming,
And the cattle all wondered whatever was coming;
It plucked by the tails the grave matronly cows,
And tossed the colts manes all over their brows;
Till, offended at such an unusual salute,
They all turned their backs, and stood sulky and mute.

So on it went capering and playing its pranks,
Whistling with reeds on the broad river's banks,
Puffing the birds as they sat on the spray,
Or the travellers grave on the king's highway.
It was not too nice to hustle the bags
Of the beggar, and flutter his dirty rags.

'Twas so bold that it feared not to play its joke
With the doctor's wig or the gentleman's cloak.
Through the forest it roared, and cried gaily, "Now,
You sturdy old oaks, I'll make you bow"
And it made them bow without more ado,
Or it cracked their great branches through and through.

Then it rushed like a monster on cottage and farm,
Striking their dwellers with sudden alarm;
And they ran out like bees in a midsummer swarm.
There were dames with their kerchiefs tied over their caps,
To see if their poultry were free from mishaps;
The turkeys they gobbled, the geese screemed aloud,
And the hens crept to roost in a terrified crowd;
There was rearing of ladder and logs laying on,
Where the thatch from the roof threatened soon to be gone.

But the wind had swept on, and had met in a lane
With a schoolboy, who panted and struggled in vain;
For it tossed him and twirled him, then passed, and he stood with his hat in pool and his shoes in the mud.

Then away went the wind in its holiday glee;
And now it was far on the billowy sea,
And the lordly ships felt its staggering blow,
And the little boats darted to and fro.
But lo! it was night, and it sank to rest
On the sea-birds' rock in the gleaming west;
Laughing to think, in its fearful fun,
How little of mischief it really had done.

ED. NOTE—A reader of the Kings County Record, a resident of Somerville, Mass., wrote us requesting that we publish a poem, that was in one of the old Canadian school Readers, of a quarter of a century ago, entitled "The Wind on a Frolic." The letter read in part as follows: "I have looked for some time to find this poem and not being successful I decided to ask your assistance. I would greatly appreciate it if I could see it in my paper, which I enjoy so much." We are pleased to comply with our subscriber's wishes and publish poem as requested.

SHANKLIN

Feb. 8—Snow, snow, beautiful snow, whirling not only through the air, but into every cranny and nook. It is most delightful to sit by a cosy open fire, munch a delicious apple, and read tales of being snowbound, when the only mode of travel was on snowshoes, and men shovelled for days to open the roads; but when it comes to every day life, five days in the week, and three weeks out of the month, and you shovel out your roads and paths today, only to awake in the morning to find you have to do just a little more that day than you did yesterday, it robs winter somewhat of its romance.

Owing to bad roads the mail reaches us by fits and starts—starts from St. John and reaches us when the road is fit.

Arather unusual sight was seen on Friday last when C. Commary had a procession of five teams of horses going to the station for freight. They had a pretty hard time getting through but they succeeded in getting there and back.

Lumbermen are finding it rather difficult in the woods, owing to the depth of snow.

R. Crossman and K. Smith of Salmon River were in this district on Monday.

Service in the hall Sunday afternoon Feb. 14th, at three o'clock. Come and bring a friend and get help and inspiration for the coming week.

STRATFORD WOMAN

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Stratford, Ontario.—"After my first baby was born I started to work on the tenth day and did a big washing on the twelfth day. Being so young (I was married at 19) I did not know what was the matter, so let it go until I was all run-down, weak and nervous, and had a bad displacement. For nearly two years I could not sleep and I would always complain of having 'not a head-ache, but a brain-ache.' My mother is taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and she recommended it to me. After taking two bottles I began to get a little sleep and to feel better and I have never left off since then, except for about three months. I can safely say I have taken thirty bottles since my second baby was born. I think it makes child-birth easier as I had terrible pains with my first three children and very few with my fourth as I was so much stronger. I am now able to do my work alone, but I am still taking the Vegetable Compound as I am nursing baby."—Mrs. OMER PAUL, 49 Cherry Street, Stratford, Ontario.

If you are suffering from any weakness which causes such symptoms as pains in the side and back and nervous feelings, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial now. C

VOYAGES IN COCKLE-SHELLS

Sir Ernest Shackleton made an 800-milbe iourney in an open boat, only 22 ft. in length, to secure help for his men left behind on an island in the Antarctic. Captain Andrews and his brother beat even this amaing feat by crossing the Atlantic from Boston to Mullion Cove in a collapsible boat only 12 feet long.

More recently two Norwegians actually rowed across the Atlantic from New York to Havre in the 18 foot clinker-built boat Fox. She drew only four inches of water.

Captain Clocum's boat, the Spray, was 40 feet long, and cost only just over $500 to build. Yet her owner sailed her 46,000 miles on all seas and in all weahers.

A hardy young Frenchman, M. Rallier du Baty, has done over 15,000 miles of ocean sailing in a Boulogne fishing smack. He visited Kerguelen and Tristan da Cunlia, and weathered a cyclone in the South Pacific.

The modern motor boat seems perfectly equal to any sort of ocean voyaging. Some few years ago the Detroit, a little thing of only 35 feet all over, cross the Atlantic from New oYrk to Queenstown, and proceeded thence to the Baltic. Another boat of similar type and butt little longer made a successfufl journey from Penzance to Fort Churchill on Hudson's Bay.

LIFE IN 1976

Professor A. M. Low, the well-known scientist, who is now in England, has or the moment turned aside from the researches in which he was engaged to take a look into the future. His predictions are to the effect that fift yyears hence home life will have disapepared, and people will virtually live in hotels and restaurants, that the present day type of ships will disappear, in favor in 1976 of giant hydroplanes which will skim along the surface of the water at a terrific speed. Ocean travel will be largely by aeroplanes, that is, passenger traffic, and the wireless will keep each one in close touch with family or business matters. The problem of clothes will, in the estimation of Professor Low, present fewer difficulties in 1976 because cotton, silk and wool textiles wil have been replaced by cheaper and more rurable forms of vegetable fibres. Professor Low also sees a reduction in the number of dress possessions owned by women, "because," he states, "women being by that time almost civilized will not be swayed by every passing wave of fashion." Regarding industrialism, Professor Low predicts an era of ugly factories built underground. Gone will be the factory chimney with its clouds of smoke—a consummation devotedly to be wished; gone too, he declares, will be the grimy factory hand, as all the rough work will be done by machinery. Education will, in consequence, be more general, and, judging not from the Professor's predictions, but from a general observance of results, looking back over the past fifty years, everyone will be busier than ever trying to dispose of the time saved by the increase of labor-saving devices, and by the systematizing of the daily tasks. Everything gained, but time.

The estimated value of the gifts at the Vanderbilt-Smith wedding is from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.
