

The Family Tradition

The family name is honored by a Monument. A sense of the fitness of things impels us to put up a Monument with all proper haste as a witness of the regard due our dead.

We feel better for it for the sake of appearances. Moreover that message in stone goes to those we want to know how we feel about them.

The only detailed catalog in the Maritimes is mailed on request by the largest firm, who ship anywhere at lowest prices, freight prepaid.

Warm Welcome Given Famous Stanley Cup

On behalf of the Dominion Express Company which had carried the trophy across Canada, the Stanley Cup, timeworn emblem of the world's hockey championship, was handed by Angus Hays, depot agent of the company, to T. Arnold, Vice-President of the Montreal Hockey Club, at the C.P.R. Windsor Station, Montreal, recently. In acknowledging its receipt, Mr. Arnold expressed the gratification of his club at the service which had been given it by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the frequent trips made by the club over the Company's lines to meet their engagements.

"The comfort and even luxury of the club's travelling arrangements," Mr. Arnold declared, "went a long way towards keeping the players in good condition for their games."

The cup bears evidence of the passing of the years. There is hardly a square inch of its surface, interior or exterior, or of its pedestal, that is not inscribed with the name of some club, player or official, who at one time or another had it in their possession. To celebrate the occasion of the return of the cup after an absence of three years, it was filled with champagne and passed around until everyone present had drunk the health of the trophy or the club.

Those present to receive the Cup at Windsor Station included the following, left to right: W. Downey, depot agent, Place Viger Station, Dominion Express Company; Angus Hays, depot agent, Windsor Station, Dominion Express Company, who handed the Cup over officially to the Club; Elmer T. Ferguson, sporting editor, Montreal Herald, who welcomed the Cup on behalf of the local press; W. O'Brien, trainer; Reg. Noble, Punch Broadbent, T. Arnold, Vice-President Montreal Hockey Club, C. Dinsmore, A. Cayford, Secretary-Treasurer; E. Garon and C. Kerman.
