LEADERS OF THE WORLD

"There is a disposition in some quarters to suggest that Britain has shot her bolt; that British brains and energy are not what they were; and that Britain is on the down grade," writes Lord Riddell in his new book, "More Things That Matter." He then proceeds to enumerate "the most notable changes of modern life, which he lists in the following order:

1. The introduction of the wireless.
2. The introduction of the aeroplane.
3. The introduction of the bicycle and motor car.
4. The development of the telegraph and cable system of the world.
5. The introduction of electric light and power.
6. The development of steam-power by new methods.
7. The development of the internal combustion engine.
8. The development of engineering in many directions, such as shipbuilding, bridge building, dock construction and tunneling.
9. Important discoveries regarding physiology.
10. The suppression of tropical diseases.
11. The development of bacteriology.
12. The development of humanizing ideas—the factory acts, improved workshops, improved dwellings—the desire to help the underdog.
13. And last, but not least, amazing discoveries regarding the constitution of matter.

Lord Riddell affirms that each "change" in this imposing and revolutionizing list owes much to persons of British birth. It was, for instance, Clerk-Maxwell, a genius born in Edinburgh, who discovered wireless, and another Scot, Alexander Graham Bell, who invented the telephone. A committee of Britishers produced the working formulas for airplane construction now in use throughout the world. The pneumatic tire was invented by Thompson, an Edinburgh man, and re-discovered by Dunlop, another Scot. The cable systems of the world have been mainly established by British capital and enterprise. From the time of Faraday, the British have taken a leading part in developing the electrical industry. The gas industry was founded by a Scot, one Murdoch, and the first dynamo manufactured by an Englishman, named Wild. Epoch-marking improvements in the manufacture of steel were made by Bessemer, Thomas and Gilchrist, and later by Arnold and Hadfield—all Britishers. All modern surgery dates from Lord Lister. It was Hunter, a Scot, who changed surgery from a handicraft to an art—and it was Simpson, of Edinburgh, who, by the discovery of ether and chloroform, robbed it of its horrors.

The list might be extended indefinitely, going to show the extent in which industry and science are in the debt of Britain and in which they continue to be as the British ingenuity and British concentration are not less general and not less valuable than ever they were. When people hear the talk of the Old Country being "done" let them turn to the record of achievement in all fields of human effort and achievement and take fresh courage!

They met under the mistletoe on Christmas Eve. "Do you know," she said, "you are the very first man to kiss me?" "Then you must have taken a correspondence course," he answered. "You certainly don't act like a beginner."

SUSSEX DEFEATED

SAINT JOHN 3-2

GREAT GAME AT THE ROYAL ARENA ON WEDNESDAY—BOTH TEAMS PUT UP HOCKEY THAT SENT THRILL THROUGH THE FANS.

In a league game played at the Royal Arena Wednesday both teams putting up a brand of hockey that worked the six hundred fans in attendance to fever heat, the Sussex Colts defeated Saint John by the score of 3-2. The game was one of the most exciting of the season, and was replete with brilliant individual rushes, nice combination work and a splendid exhibition of net guarding by both goalies.

While the play was not rough it was featured by considerable tripping. Saint John being the principal offenders, eight penalties being imposed on members of that team for this offence and Sussex receiving a free shot.

Bill Hay refereed, and while his task was not an easy one, he kept the game well under control at all stages, and dealt out decisions in an impartial manner.

The first period opened with a bang and the rubber was carried up and down the ice in a whirlwind style. After one minute and 20 seconds play, Lutz on a pass from P. Radcliffe beat out McPhee and notched up goal one for the locals. Saint John made a vigorous attack on the next five minutes, blocking hot shots. John Friars and Harold Radcliffe made two nice tries which McPhee handled. Hallisey went through the Sussex defence and shot but missed the net. Harold Radcliffe was sent to the pen for tripping, and while doing time, Saint John scored a goal. Short landing the puck behind Roach on a pass from Lane. With 3 minutes to go both teams worked hard but no further scores were made, and the period ended in a tie, 1-1.

In the second period after five minutes of fast and furious play Harold Radcliffe scored goal two for Sussex. There was no further scoring for the following thirteen minutes, when J. Friars in a rush from end to end of the ice notched another for the Colts making the score 3-1 in favor of Sussex. This score was made while Saint John had only four men on the ice. Hallisey had been sent to the pen for tripping and Fraser came on to replace another player. The game proceeded but the man Fraser was supposed to relieve did not leave the ice, thus leaving Saint John playing seven men, six on the ice and one in the penalty box. When this fact was discovered the game was stopped and Fraser was sent to the penalty box for 3 minutes. There was no further scoring and the period ended Sussex 3, Saint John 1.

In the third period Sussex did not score, the only tally being made by Kiley on a pass from Lane after 10 minutes of play. Both teams worked hard but the game ended without further scoring, the count standing Sussex 3, Saint John 2.

The line-up was as follows:

Saint John	Goal	Sussex
McPhee	Defence	Roach
Hallisey	Defence	P. Radcliffe
Gilbert	Defence	J. Friars
Fraser	Forwards	H. Radcliffe
Boudreau	Forwards	N. Lutz
Lane	Forwards	C. Brooks
Kiley	Forwards	E. Friar
Thompson	Forwards	E. Friars
Short	Forwards	M. Radcliffe

WEDDING BELLS

Chestnut-Hayward

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the presence of friends and relatives, Dec. 23, 1925, when Rev. A. V. Morash united in marriage Miss Elsie Elizabeth Hayward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hayward, Golden Grove, and George Archibald Chestnut, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Chestnut, of Sussex. The bride looked charming in a gown of white brocade tulle with bridal veil and carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations. She was attended by Miss Frances Chestnut, sister of the groom. Hartley Hayward, brother of the bride, was best man. After the ceremony the bridal couple motored to the home of the groom's parents, where a dainty luncheon was served. Many gifts were received by the bride and groom, including articles of cut glass and silver. Mr. and Mrs. Chestnut will reside in Sussex for the present.

"SO BIG"

HOW BIG? SO-O-O BIG!

WALLACE BEERY gives one of his inimitable performances — probably the best of his career.

HOW BIG IS BABY? How big is my little man? Selina would ask. "So-o-o big" he would shout. And many years later, when the world named him a great man he stood before his mirror and asked himself— "How big?"

Colleen's greatest, from a book the whole world loves. How big? So-o-o-o big! Bigger than anything you've ever seen. A story that carries you from the heights to the depths in the life of a wonderful girl—a girl whom misfortune couldn't down—a girl who won against the greatest odds.

HOW BIG? When you leave the theatre it'll ring in your ears and you'll be asking yourself—"How Big?"—and you'll be thinking of Selina whom life couldn't down—and of how great she made the life that was hers to live—So many things you'll think about and, maybe, when all is quiet and you're all alone you'll think again and then maybe you'll be saying to yourself—"How Big Am I?"
