THE LOYALIST.

SAINT JOHN, N. B., OCT. 27, 1842.

CANADIAN AFFAIRS.

And in speaking of that much calumniated body, the Legislative Council of Lower Canada, his Lordship observes,

"I am far from concurring in the censure which the Assembly and the press have attempted to cast on the acts of the Legislative Council. I have no hesitation in saying that many of the bills which it is most severely blamed for opposing, were bills which it could not have passed without a dereliction of its duty to the constitution, the maintenance of which Great Britain, and the white English population of the colony. If there is any censure to be passed on its general conduct, it is for having confined itself to the merely negative and defensive duties of a legislative body; for having too frequently succeeded with merely defeating objectionable methods of obtaining desirable ends, without supplying its loss by proposing measures, which would have achieved the good in view without the mixture of evil. The natural assumption which pervaded the legislature of the Assembly, and its thorough want of legislative skill or respect for constitutional principles, rendered almost all its bills obnoxious to the objections made by the Legislative Council; and the remonstrance which their exorbitant conduct have occasioned, convinces me that the colony has reason to congratulate itself on the existence of an assembly which possessed and used the power of stopping a course of legislation that if successful, would have demoralized every British interest, and overthrown every guarantee of order and national liberty."

And in speaking of the daring attempts of the Papineau faction to secure the two upper branches of the Government, he says,

"A singular instance of this occurred in 1836, with respect to the renewal of the jury law, to which the Assembly attached great importance, and to which the Legislative Council felt a strong opposition, on account of its having in effect placed the juries entirely in the hands of the French portion of the population. In order to secure the renewal of this law, the Assembly resolved to tie the same bill by which it renewed the bills of supply to the Legislative Council, calculating on the [illegible] not venturing to defeat a law [illegible] much [illegible] to the revenue as [illegible] by rejecting the former. The Council, however, rejected the bill; and for several months withheld for a session, because the two Houses [illegible] about a jury law."

In the next number we shall make [illegible] particularly to our readers, [illegible] describes exactly the manner in which has so long prevailed in this province, and the Papineau of our House of Assembly may be very readily detected.—

"The great business of the Assemblies is, usually, parish business; the making [illegible] parish roads and parish bridges. There are in most of these provinces any local bodies possessing authority to impose local assessments, for the management of local affairs. To do these things is the business of the Assembly; and to induce the Assembly to attend to the particular interests of each county, is the especial business of its county member. The surplus revenue of the province is swelled as large as possible, by cutting down the payment of public services to as low a scale as possible; and the real duties of government are, sometimes, insufficiently provided for, in order that more may be left to be divided among the constituent bodies. When we want a bridge, we take a judge to build it; and the quiet and forcible way in which a nominated or provincial legislature discards the tendency to retrench, in the most necessary departments of the public service, in order to satisfy the demands for local works. This land is owned by the Assembly on the motion of its members; the necessity of obtaining the previous consent of the crown to money votes never having been adopted by the Colonial Legislatures from the practice of the British House of Commons. There is a perfect struggle among the whole body to get as much as possible of this land for their respective constituents; cabals are formed, by which the different members mutually play into each other's hands; general politics are made to bear on private business, and private business on general politics; and at the close of the Parliament, the member who has succeeded in securing the largest portion of the grant for his constituents, renders an easy account of his stewardship, with confident assurance of his re-election.

"Not only did the leaders of the Lower Canadian Assembly avail themselves of the patronage thus afforded, by the large supplementation of the province, but they turned this system to much greater account, by using it to obtain influence over the constituencies.

"The majority of the Assembly of Lower Canada is secured by its opponents having, in the most systematic and persevering manner, employed this means of corrupting the electoral bodies. The influences of M. Papineau are said to have been levelled in their promises of the benefits which they could obtain from the Assembly for the country, whose self-appointed patriot he was. The return of members of opposition politics is secured, in many instances, to have been ensured; and elements combine are alleged to have been sometimes created into existence, by an entire withdrawal of grants, until they returned members favourable to the majority; some of the English members who acted with M. Papineau, excused themselves to their constituents by alleging that they were compelled to do so, in order to get a road or a bridge, which their constituents demanded. Whether it be true or false, that the above were ever carried to such a pitch as is obviously one, which might have been easily and safely perpetrated by a person possessing M. Papineau's influence in the Assembly."

(To be concluded next week.)

The Legislature of Canada is prorogued to the 18th day of November next. His Excellency Sir Charles Bagot, at the close of his speech delivered on the occasion, made use of the following language:—

Honorable Gentlemen, and Gentlemen:

In relieving you for the present from the labors you have undertaken in your Legislative capacity, I would express my confident hope that when you return to your homes, you will use your just influence in promoting in your several Districts that unanimity and good feeling which it has been my endeavour to establish, and so following those lines of permanent peace and prosperity, on which I trust you will unite with me in believing that we may, under Providence, be permitted to [illegible] days.

How His Excellency can, by a moment's imagine, that his acts have been calculated to promote "unanimity and good feeling," we know not. Does he suppose that a loyalist, who, a few years since, was called out to suppress rebellion; will feel well to see the very men against whom he fought, called to offices of trust and emolument, and the government of the country placed in their hands; while those who were true in the hour of danger, are discarded, dishonored and disgraced? Or will not the loyalist rather say, in the forcible language of the Gaberus Star:— Surely I must have done wrong, and they must have been right in rebelling?" We most ardently wish to see "peace and prosperity" in Canada, but we are sorry to say, that we see no reason at present to expect it. Sir Charles is evidently carrying out the measures of [illegible] introduced by Lord Sydenham —measures which we deem, absurd and totally unsuited for, under a Colonial Government. Want of space prevents us from giving our opinions at present more clearly; but shall advert to this subject again.

The Herald and the New Brunswicker are fairly at loggerheads, and the question at issue seems to be "corruption versus anti-corruption. We wish success to the latter; it is a fact which cannot be controverted, that the most disgraceful acts of peculation has for a long time been carried on—successfully perpetrated—among our representatives and their friends, indeed, how could it be expected to be otherwise, when the same men who have the power of granting money, are the persons who receive a commission for expending it, and who audit their own accounts! The plain fact of the matter, is this; it is the effects of education at home; and granting as a boon to the Colonies, the power of governing themselves, has proved a curse to them, by spreading too near republicanism. All the misfortunes which have befallen the present British Colonies have been caused by placing too much power in the hands of the Assemblies—a power they have invariably abused. And the only way to ensure prosperity for the future, is to retrace our steps.

His Excellency, Sir Wm. Colebrooke, arrived in town on Saturday evening last from St. Andrews; and on Monday paid a visit to Kingston, where he was received by the Kingston troop of Volunteer Cavalry. A loyal address was presented to him by the above, signed by a large number of respectable inhabitants, and to which, his Excellency was graciously pleased to reply. His Excellency after partaking of a luncheon with the Sheriff, returned to town the same evening; and on Tuesday morning, accompanied by his suite, left for Head Quarters, in the steamer New Brunswick.

NORTH AMERICA STEAM BOAT.—Much anxiety has been felt here this week by the non-arrival of this boat.—We hear that Mr. Whitney has received letters from Boston, informing him that a few hours out on board on Saturday evening last, at 9 o'clock, while lying at the wharf in Boston; and that her upper works were consumed. We understand she was insured to the amount of one fourth of her value.

Miramichi, Oct. 19.—The barque Jane Lowden, John Cockeline, master, while on her passage from Liverpool to this port, on the 20th ult. in lat. 38, long. 45, fell in with the barque West, from Quebec, timber laden. Capt. C. spoke the West, and the master reported that his vessel was waterlogged with ten feet water in her hold, and he intended going on board a brig that was near. Capt. C. offered to give any assistance in his power, which was declined. The Jane Lowden lay by the West all night; in the morning Capt. C. went on board, and found only three feet of water in her hold, and after having the vessel pumped out, he sent his mate, with six of his crew, with instructions to carry the vessel to Cork.—Gleaner.

Capt. Vaughan, of the barque Princess at St. John, from Dublin, reports that he fell in with the West on the 13th Sept. in lat. 45. 21, long. 27, and supplied her with some provisions. She had a temporary tiller rigged, the wheel having been carried away, but appeared to be otherwise in good condition, though still making some water. Capt. V. understood the men from the Jane Lowden had been 17 days on board the West.

NOTICE TO MARINERS.

ARRIVING AT THE PORT OF SAINT JOHN (N. B.) AND OUT BAYS.

WHEN the sailing Without Officer has inspected the Passports and exchanged the usual compliments with the Master, and ascertained that all on board are in Health, they will be visited by the Warden of Fleets, the Government Emigrant Agent for the Province, who will afford them information and assistance in procuring Employment—public lands and private farms—as their cases may require.

Immigrants are earnestly cautioned not to remain idle in town, where the expenses of living are greatly more than in the country, and they should be carefully cautioned against the many designing persons they will meet with, who will endeavour to induce them to waste the money they have brought with them.

Persons of character are kept by the Government Agent at Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton, and other towns, to which all the most eligible places for settlement and employment in the Country, Steamers leave this place at Inland Town three times every week during the Summer and evening for Fredericton (the capital) passing through Kingston—and three times a week to Queen's County—and three times a week to Sussex Vale, in King's County, which leads to Petitcodiac, Dorchester and Westmorland, whither also there is a weekly communication on the Bay of Fundy, with opportunity of landing at Quaco (St. John county) Shepody or Hopewell, Memramcook, and the head of Petitcodiac, from which there is a land carriage to Sackville, at about 14 miles on the way to Fredericton and Woodstock. To the westward Steamers ply twice every week to Digby, in Annapolis Basin, St. Andrews, and St. Stephens in the County Charlotte, where Emigration agents are established, and to whose every assistance will be shown as to the wants of Emigrants.

The Crown Lands are sold by the Government here at 10s. currency per acre, and the Emigrant Agent is ready with documents to direct to such Townships and Settlements for immediate settlement as those leaving the country may wish. Those without ability to proceed immediately to the country, or from sickness or the arrival of friends who may reside in the country, or from any other cause, may be put in possession of Lots of Land in any of the Townships, by order of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council—viz: for Two years, Tenant and Actual Settlement.

The indenture of all grants of land, granted and applied for west of Toronto in this Province, if they quickly progress in their improvements. The Emigrant Agent will, when asked, give all information to passengers from Great Britain and Ireland, as to the best mode of proceeding to their destination, and will give them letters to the Agents in the several Districts, which may be necessary in their future progress.

Emigrants are cautioned against purchasing Lots of Land from Individuals, for any further information on this head can be obtained from the Government Agent.
