HATH NOT THY ROSE A CANKER.

BY MRS. LOIS B. ADAMS.

Pressed with the weight of morning dews,
Its slender stalk the rose was bending,
And red and white in changing hues
Upon its cheek were sweetly blending;
But underneath the leaflets bright,
By blushing beauty hid from sight,
Enamoured with its fragrance rare,
The canker worm was feasting there.

O! thou who in thy youthful days
Ambition's wreaths are proudly twining,
And fondly hoping worldly praise
Will cheer thine after years declining,
Beware lest every tempting rose,
That in ambition's pathway grows,
Conceal beneath its semblance fair,
The lurking canker of despair.

And thou who in thine early morn,
For sin the paths of truth art leaving,
Remember, though no pointed thorn
May pierce the garland thou art weaving,
Yet every bud whence flow'rets bloom,
Shall its own living sweets entomb;
For deep the canker worm of care,
Is feasting on its vitals there.

Thou too, the beautiful and bright,
At Pleasure's shrine devoutly kneeling,
Dost thou not see the fatal blight
Across thy roseate chaplet stealing?
Time hath not touch'd with fingers cold
Those glossy leaves of beauty's mould,
And yet each bud and blossom gay
Is marked for slow but sure decay.

O! ye who sigh for flowers that bloom
In one eternal spring of gladness,
Where beauty finds no darkened tomb,
And joy hath never dreamed of sadness:
Elysian fields are yours to roam,
Where groves of endless pleasures bloom
O! linger not where sorrow's tears,
May blight the cherish'd hopes of years.

THE BROTHERS.

An Anecdote from the German of Schiller.

The following anecdote of two Germans, (with a proud joy do I say it) has one indisputable merit—it is true. I hope it may instil more warmth into my readers, than all the volumes of Grandison or of Pamela.

Two brothers, Barons of W——, were in love with a young and excellent lady, and neither was acquainted with the passion of the other. The affection of both was tender and vehement—it was their first: the maiden was beautiful, and formed of sensibility. They suffered their inclinations to increase to the utmost bounds, for the danger the most dreadful to their hearts was unknown to them, to have a brother for a rival. Each forbore an early explanation with the lady, and thus were both deceived: until an unexpected occurrence discovered the whole secret of their sentiments.

Their love had already risen to its utmost height: that most unhappy passion, which has caused almost as cruel ravages as its dreadful counterpart, had taken such complete possession of their hearts, as to render a sacrifice on either side impossible. The fair one, full of commiseration for the unhappy situation of these two unfortunates, would not decide upon the exclusion of either, but submitted her own feelings to the decision of their brotherly love.

Conqueror in this doubtful strife, betwixt duty and sentiment, which our philosophers are always so ready to decide, but which the practical man undertakes so slowly, the elder brother said to the younger, 'I know thou lovest the maiden as vehement as myself. I will not ask for which of us a priority of right should determine. Do thou remain here, whilst I seek the wide world. I am willing to die, that I may forget her. If such be my fate, brother, then is she thine, and may Heaven bless thy love! Should I not meet with death, do thou set out, and follow my example.'

He left Germany, and hastened to Holland; but the form of his beloved still followed him. Far from the climate which she inhabited, banished from the spot which contained the whole felicity of his heart, in which alone he was able to exist, the unhappy youth sickened,—as the plant withers which is ravished from its maternal bed in Asia by the powerful European, and forced from its more clement sun into a remote and rougher soil. He reached Amsterdam in a desponding condition, where he fell ill of a violent and dangerous fever. The form of her he loved predominated in his frantic dreams; his health depended on her possession. The physicians were in doubt of his life, and nothing but the assurance of being restored again to her, rescued him from the arms of death. He arrived in his native city changed to a skeleton, the most dreadful image of consuming grief, and with tottering steps reached the door of his beloved—of his brother.

'Brother, behold me once again.—Heaven knows how I have striven to subdue the emotions of my heart. I can do no more.'

He sunk senseless into the lady's arms.

The younger brother was no less determined. In a few weeks he was ready to set out.

'Brother, thou carriedst thy grief with thee to Holland. I will endeavour to bear mine farther. Lead not the maiden to the altar till I write to thee. Fraternal love alone permits such a stipulation. Should I be more fortunate than thou wert, in the name of God, let her be thine, and may Heaven prosper thy union. Should I not, may the Almighty in that case judge further between us! Farewell. Take this sealed packet; do not open it till I am far from hence. I am going to Batavia.'

He then sprung into a coach. The other remained motionless, and absorbed in grief, for his brother had surpassed him in generosity. Love and at the same time, the sorrow at losing such a man, rushed forcibly upon his mind.—The noise of the flying vehicle pierced him to the heart—his life was feared. The lady—but no! of her I must not yet speak.

The packet was opened. It contained a complete assignment of all his German possessions to his brother, in the event of fortune being favourable to the fugitive in Batavia. The latter, subduer of himself, sailed with some Dutch merchants, and arrived safely at that place. A few weeks after, he sent his brother the following lines:—

'Here, where I return thanks to the Almighty, here, in another world, do I think of thee, and of our loves, with all the joy of a martyr. New scenes and events have expanded my soul, and God has given me strength to offer the greatest sacrifice to friendship—the maiden—God! here a tear doth fall—the last—I have conquered—the maiden is thine Brother, it was not ordained that I should possess her; that is she would not have been happy with me. If the thought should ever come to her, that she would have been—Brother! brother! with difficulty do I tear her from my soul. Do not forget how hard the attainment of her has been to thee. Treat her always as thy youthful passion at present teaches thee. Treat her always as the dear legacy of a brother, whom thy arms will never more enfold. Farewell! Do not write to me, when thou celebratest thy marriage—my wounds still bleed. Write to me, that thou art happy. My deed is a surety to me, that God will not forsake me in a foreign world.'

The nuptials were celebrated. The most felicitous of marriages lasted a year. At the end of that period the lady died. In her expiring moments, she acknowledged to her most intimate friend the unhappy secret of her bosom:—the exiled brother she had loved the strongest.

Both brothers still live. The elder upon his estates in Germany, where he has married again. The younger remains in Batavia, and has become a fortunate and shining character. He made a vow never to marry, and has kept it.

A Romantic Adventure.—The following story has been the subject of conversation during the week. We do not vouch for its accuracy either wholly or in part. Indeed, we have some recollection of seeing something like it in print many years ago; but, as there is nothing new under the sun, it is of course not impossible but that the same kind of an occurrence may have happened twice. On Monday evening last, about dusk a commercial traveller was proceeding from Cheltenham to Gloucester in a gig, when he was accosted by a respectably dressed lady, who informed him that she had been disappointed by the coach, and requested him to give her a seat in his gig to Gloucester. Commercial travellers are proverbialy gallant and good natured; and the gentlemen of the road in this instance possessed all the best characteristic of his "order." He was happy at the opportunity afforded him of being of the least service to the lady, whose petition was rather agreeable than otherwise with his good fortune, which had thrown such a companion in his way to beguile the solitariness and tedium of his journey, he at once granted the request and handed the lady to the seat at his side. The lady's proportions were somewhat of the largest, and the arm which the traveller assisted as she sprung into the vehicle, capable of defending its possesser from any improper liberties. Whether this circumstance induced the traveller to cast his eyes downwards, to observe whether all proportions corresponded, or whether, like many other gentlemen of his craft, he boasted of being a connoisseur in fine ankles, we do not know; but the story goes, that while his eyes did wander towards the feet of his companion, his sight was far from being gratified by detecting some thing which bore very much the appearance of a man's trousers peeping from beneath a silk cloak and flounced petticoat. All the uncomfortable reminiscences of past dangers, and all the anecdotes which he had ever heard or read from the Newgate Calender, came fresh to his recollection. He had no doubt he was riding cheek by jowl with a second Dick Turnip, who was only waiting a suitable opportunity to rob, and perhaps murder him. A lucky idea rose in his mind; he drew his silk handkerchief from his pocket; it fell into the road; it was a splendid, "wipe," and as valuable as the one that an Egyptian gave to Othello's mother he could not think of losing it, but his horse was too hasty tempered to allow him to trust the reins into strange hands—a thousand apologies, but would the lady be kind enough to step out, and pick up the handkerchief which was now some yards in the rear of the gig. The lady readily assented, and while she was performing this errand the commercial gentleman gave whip to his fleet courser, and soon left his suspicious fellow voyageur far behind him. When he felt it prudent to moderate his speed, he discovered that the lady had left in the seat, when she dismounted, a handsome muff, and putting his hand inside of it he found a brace of pistols, loaded, capped, and balled, and with the muff and its formidible contents the traveller arrived safely in Gloucester, congratulating himself most heartily on the narrow escape which he supposed he had experienced.—This is a very good story, if true.—Gloucester Journal.

WILMER & SMITH'S

EUROPEAN TIMES,

AND

UNITED STATES, CANADA, WEST INDIA & SOUTH AMERICAN INTELLIGENCER.

THE object of this Publication is to present a striking and faithful abstract of all events occurring in Europe or elsewhere, interesting to the citizens of the United States, Canada, the West Indies, and South America, made up the hour at which the Steamers and Packets sail.

The leading feature of the EUROPEAN TIMES will be a carefully digested abstract of General News, Correct Returns of the principal British and Continental Markets Arrivals and Sailings to and from all Ports of the above countries,—Vessels Spoken at Sea, Wrecks, Casualties,—in short a glance at every circumstance in which the Merchant, the Manufacturer, the Trader, and the Citizen generally can take an interest.

The Value of such a Publication must be tested by its accuracy. No pains will be spared to make it in that respect unexceptionable. Editors of Newspapers and the Commercial Community, who are now obliged on the arrival of a Packet Ship or Steamer, to wade through files of Newspapers, extending, not unfrequently, over Fourteen or Sixteen Days, for information in which they are most interested, can hardly fail, in this COUP' ŒIL of News, to find their labor abridged and their wants and wishes immediately ratified.

The EUROPEAN TIMES is not intended, to supersede, so much as to accompany the more ponderous files of the London Daily and other Journals, to which it will act as a kind of pilot balloon; the condensation of every item of news will be apportioned to its relative importance, leaving the leviathans of the press until time and opportunity enable their readers to meander, without inconvenience, through their ample and voluminous pages.

The European Times will be Edited by a Gentleman long connected in an editoral capacity with the Liverpool Press. Parties who are desirous of bringing New Inventions, New Books, Works of Arts, or subjects of general interest, under the eye of the American public, may address him personally, and depend upon his services.

The price of the European Times will be Four Dollars per Annum. All Orders to be addressed with remittances or reference for payment, to Messrs. Wilmer and Smith, Express Newspaper Office, Church Street, Liverpool.

Subscriptions will be received at all the Offices of Messrs. Harden & Co. in the United States.

Communications for the Editor may be addressed to Mr. John Dignan, 5 South John Street, Liverpool.

THE Subscriber, grateful for the patronage he has hithorto received, and anxious to merit the same indulgence for the future, has removed to that central and well finished House next to St. Stephen's Kirk, in King's Square—where he will ever be ready to entertain those who may favour him with a call, at a moments notice; and will keep on hand the best the market affords, and good liquors. There are good stables connected with the establishments and a careful hostler is engaged. In addition to this the Quaco (Mr. Nugent's) stage puts up at this house, and will leave for Quaco every Wednesday morning, and return on the Tuesday evening following.

To Farmer's frequenting the market, he would say, that from the close proximity of his House, and the accommodations he can afford them, they cannot do better than to give him a call.

With a Circulation double that of any paper in the Union—the strongest possible evidence of its value and popularity.

Alexander's Messenger,
MAMMOTH SHEET!

Every Week containing Thirty-Six Columns of new and interesting Reading matter! The cheapest Newspaper In The World.

THE publisher of the Messenger feels justified in asserting that his paper which has been long established on a firm basis, shall continue to be what it really is, calculated for all classes of society—the Merchant, Manufacturer, and Farmer, the Man of Leisure, and, in fact, All will find plenty of amusement and instruction in its columns. With the means at his control, and the extensive arrangements made both at home and abroad to secure the services of the most eminent writers of the day, who are to furnish communications on a variety of subjects the Publisher is confident of arranging each week a Literary feast that will be sure to gratify the taste of the most fastidious. A full and comprehensive view of the events continually occuring in all parts of the world—the local as well as Distant News, Sales of Stocks, Bank Note Detector, Mercantile Prices Current, Original and Selected Tales, Treatises on Agriculture, Science and the Mechanic Arts, Poetry and Anecdotes, embracing Wit Wisdom, and Originality, all of which are to be found in the columns of the Messenger constitute it THE CHEAPEST AND BEST PAPER PUBLISHED IN THE WORLD!

As a Family Newspaper the Messenger presents superior attractions. Slang and vulgarity never can bring a blush to the cheek of modesty. As a strenuous advocate for the cause of Education—for rearing the rising generation in a manner that will tend to make them good citizens of a free Republic—for advancing morals and religion, it should be in the hands of every parent that has any regard for the welfare of their children. As a publication for circulation in the country the Messenger has no superior. Combining, as it does, with other matters, the current news the of otday, divested of all tautology, the reader is enabled to ascertain facts without their being interwoven, or wading through a dull mass of superfluous matter.

Alexander's Messenger is published every Wednesday, on a beautiful White Sheet, of the largest class. Single copies are forwarded to Subscribers every week during the year for two dollars in advance—or Ten Persons, Clubbing together, can have it for the same period by forwarding the Publisher a Ten Dollar Note free of Postage, which is less than any paper of the same size can be furnished by any other office in the Country. The agent or Postmaster forwarding the money, will be presented with an additional copy of the paper for One Year

☞ For Forty Dollars in current notes, ten to us in one remittance, he will forward Forty one copies of the Messenger and will present to the agent or Postmaster forwarding the same a Complete set of Walter Scott's Popular Novels, which are now be years past, since its commencement, we are bold to say, that no paper has ever been distributed to the same number of patrons with fewer causes of complaint—in fact we have the most careful and trustworthy Clerks now in our employ, and no inducements are withheld to make them attentive and systematic in the discharge of their various duties: therefore, persons subscribing for the paper at a distance may rely on receiving it regularly and punctually by the due course of the Mail.

☞ At the expiration of the term subscribed and paid for by clubs, the paper is invariably Discontinued, unless the Subscriptions are renewed. All letters must be post paid, or they will not be taken out of the Post Office.—Address

CHARLES ALEXANDER,
Athenian Buildings, Franklin Place, Philadelphia

Postmasters are authorized, and generally willing to forward money to newspapers free of expense, where the letters are signed by themselves Persons wishing to transmit will therefore, when it can be done, wright just what they want the postmaster to say for them, by so doing they will only have the trouble of signing.

Human Hair.

Cleanliness of the Head and Hair.

Strange it is that persons who attend strictly to personal cleanliness, baths, &c. should neglect the Head—the hair—the most essential—the most exposed—and the most beautiful when properly cared for, of all the gifts of the Creator. Perfectly free may it be kept of dandruff or scurf with the certainty that the hair cannot fall out, by the use of the Balm of Columbia. Ladies, will you make your toilet without this article. I answer fearlessly, no, if you have once tried and experienced its purifying effects—its sweet perfume.

A hundred articles have been put forth on the credit of this—the only first—the only real valuable article. A mass of testimony from all classes to these facts.

Look out.—Counterfeits are abroad look always for the name of Comstock & Co on the splendid wrappers and never buy it without the same.

From the Boston Chronicle, January 16.

☞ We see by an advertisement in another column that Messrs. Comstock & Co., the agents for Oldridge's Balm of Columbia, have deputies to sell that article in Boston and elsewhere.—We know a lady of this city whose hair was so nearly gone as to expose entirely her phrenological developements, which, considering that they betokened a most amiable disposition, was not in reality very unfortunate. Nevertheless she mourned the loss of locks that she had worn, and after a year's fruitless resort to miscalled restoratives, purchased, some months ago, a bottle of Oldridge's Balm, and she has now ringlet in rich profusion, glossy, and of raven blackness. We are not puffing—none of the commodity has been sent to us, and, indeed, we do not want any, for though we were obliged to wear a wig a year ago we have now, through its virtue, hair enough, and of a passible quality, of our own.

NEW SERIES OF THE

LITERARY GARLAND.

A Monthly Magazine of General Literature

EMBELLISHED WITH

Beautiful Engravings on Steel, Music &c.

COMMENCING JANUARY 1, 1843.

Terms, Fifteen Shillings per Annum—Seventeen Shillings and Sixpence when sent by Mail.

WHEN some four years ago, the publication of the Garland was first announced, the Pubishers stated that they could not be very lavish in their promises. They did not then know how far they could rely on public support, nor were they aware of the resources within their reach. It has now, however, triumphantly surmounted all the obstacles which encompassed its earlier youth, and won for itself a name in the Provincial annals as the first literary plant, the roots of which have found a nutritious soil.

The next volume of the Garland will begin a second series, so much improved in all its outward adornments as to vie with the most beautiful magazines on this continent or in the world. It will denote the rapid stride in intelligence and enterprise, which within the last four years, has marked the Provincial character and fortunes. The Publishers will spare neither labour nor expense in their endeavours to make it deserving of encouragement, and worthy to minister to the tastes of those who patronise it. Nor do they fear but that they will receive support commensurate with the efforts made to merit it.

The contents of the Garland have generally been written expressely for it and by contributors in the Province. The number of these contributors has exhibited a steady increase, while the sterling excellence of the articles has at all times been such as to reflect an unexampled lustre upon the literary character of the country; and the work, taken as a whole, has met with the fullest approbation of those best qualified to judge; and from both press and people, the most flattering assurances of satisfaction have been unceasingly received.

The greater number of the contrsbutors, already known with favour to the public, will continue to enrich and enliven the pages of the Garland; and the improvement of its external appearance, as well as its, more extensive circulation, will naturally call new competitors into the field, and the Publishers, being no longer in fear of inability to redeem their promises, unhesitatingly pledge themselves, that no effort shall be, on their part, wanting, to call forth whatever there is of talent in the country, and to develope, the literary resources, of the Province."

The first number will be embelliseed with a beautiful engraving on Steel, from the burin of a distinguished artist, and on such a subject as will give due effect to the painter's genius. It will be followed by similar Engravings in rapid succession, executed in the best style of the art.

The Musical Department will continue under able management. It will, however, be more diversified with an intermingling of songs with the more strictly musical composition which have hitherto been the most prominent feature in this elegant department. The gentleman who has hitherto superintended the music of the Garland, is one of our most distinguished Professors, and under his superintendance it will remain.

The current volume will be completed with the November number; but the first of the new series will be issued only in the January following, being prepared in time to be delivered generally throughout the Province on the first day of the new year. The arrangement has been considered better than the former mode, as by it the whole of each term of subscription will be comprised within a single year. The following numbers will be publisped regularly on the first day of every month, and will be delivered, wherever practicable, on the days of publication.

The Work will be printed on paper of the finest quality, with type of the most beautiful and newest pattern. Each number will contain at least forty-eight large super-royal ocavo pages, but that number will frequently be exceeded. The twelve numbers will form at the close of the year a handsome illustrated volume, containing a large quantity of interesting and valuable matter well calculated for preservation.

The terms will be, as hitherto, three dollars a year, exclusive of postage, making the charge for delivery at any Post office in the Province only three dollars and a half. Payments will be expected in advance, when the volume has been commenced, and the amount will be considered due, after the delivery of the first number, by those with whose names the Publishers are favoured in the interval from the present time until January next.

Persons desirous of acting as agents will be entitled to a copy of the Garland, on procuring six subscribers, and remitting the money.

LOVELL & GIBSON, Publishers,
St. Nicholas Street, Montreal.

☞ The assistance and influence of friends of Literature in the Province are respectfully solicited, to extend the circulation of the Garland. Montreal, July, 1842.
