THE AERIAL STEAM CARRIAGE.

We beg our readers to accept the extra which accompanies our publication of this day, containing two excellent engravings of the new Aerial Steam Carriage, and full details respecting it, as a proof that we shall omit no opportunity of putting them in possession of every event of paramount interest on this side of the water, without reference to pecuniary outlay or personal labour. The invention, of which our readers are now in full possession, has excited extraordinary interest in England, arising from the novelty of the undertaking, its ingenuity, and the soaring genius of the inventor, whose lofty flights, altho' they have provoked ridicule on the one hand, have received on the other, it must be acknowledged the commendation of several distinguished scientific men. The interest which the new 'Flying Machine' has excited, is the handsomest compliment to the inventor. Already has a Bill been introduced into Parliament by a sedate and practical member for incorporating a company to carry out its principle. The specification of the patent was only enrolled in the court of chancery on Wednesday last, and since that time the subject has afforded unceasing employment for the pencil of the artist and the pen of literateur. Mechanical science has certainly achieved some extraordinary feats, during the last quarter of a century, but whether flying in the air at the rate of sixty or a hundred miles an hour is to be added to the number, will soon be determined.

CHINA.

The monthly Overland Mail brings intelligence from Bombay, to the 3d. of Feb. Intelligence came to hand that the pacific relations with the Chinese Government had been threatened with serious disturbance. Sir Henry Pottinger, while he was still at Amoy, on board the steam frigate Queen, issued a proclamation in English and Chinese, dated 23d. Nov., declaring that he had, since his arrival at Amoy, learned with extreme horror and astonishment that many more than 100 British subjects, who had been wrecked in the ship Nerbudda and brig Ann, in Sept., 1841, and March, 1842, on the coast of the island of Formosa, had recently been put to death by the Chinese authorities there, who alleged that this cold blooded act had been perpetrated by order of the Emperor. He had obtained positive proof, he says, that those commands "were drawn from his Imperial Majesty by the gross and merciless misrepresentations of the local authorities in Formosa; who, with the object of personal aggrandizement, basely and falsely reported to the Cabinet at Pekin that both the ship Nerbudda, and subsequently the brig Ann, had gone to that island with hostile intentions; an assertion not more lying and false than manifestly absurd, since neither of those vessels were ships of war, or had, when wrecked, any troops or other fighting men on board of them," Sir Henry goes on to say, that he was resolved to demand from the Emperor the local authorities should be degraded and condignly punished, and that their property should be confiscated, and the proceeds handed over to the officers of the British Government for the relief and support of the families of those who had been thus mercilessly put to death. A threat of renewed hostilities was held out in case the demand should not be complied with.

The Plenipotentiary proceeded to Hongkong, where new embarrassments awaited him. A formidable riot occurred at Canton on the 7th of December. The crew of some ships principally Lascars, had been allowed to go on shore about nine o'clock in the morning, and their irregular conduct provoked an attack on the natives, who had, it is said, previously been excited by an anti-British party in Canton. The Lascars retreated towards the British factory, to which the attack was transferred. In the afternoon, the British and American ladies were sent to Mingqua's factory, that merchant politely sending chairs for them. From the terrace of that building they witnessed the scene of riot. Early in the evening, the mob set fire to the English flag staff, and the flames soon spread to the factory. The Eastern factories were burned; the Western were saved by the current of the air which though light, intended to drive the flames in the opposite direction. Towards midnight, there was a lull in the commotion, and the ladies were sent, in Mingqua's boat, with a large escort down to the Bocca Tigris.

"A strong body of troops at length appeared at about noon and cleared the square of the lawless rabble who had been more than twenty hours in possession of it.

About the same time arrived the steamer Prosperine, with Sir Hugh Gough on board; and the rioting ceased. The correspondence with Sir Hugh and Sir Henry Pottinger. Sir Hugh and Sir Henry, at their request, to leave the steamer, and anchor off the factory.

For many months the crime of [illegible] has been of almost nightly occurrence in Paris and its neighbourhood. The National says—'The capital has become for some time past the theatre of audacious murders. The Forest of Bondy is more insecure than the first city of the civilized world. An unfortunate operative, who was late on his return home, was taken up bathed in blood in the Rue de Bourdonnais, and shortly afterwards expired. Is it possible that the police, with a million of secret service money, cannot at least protect the lives of the citizens?

The Commerce announces that orders have been given to the engineers charged with the direction of the works of the fortifications of Paris, to redouble activity in forwarding the construction of the fifteen detached forts, at which upwards of 200,000 civil and military workmen are now employed. Five of those forts will shortly be completed, namely, those of Mount Valerien, of the East at St. Denis, Romainville, Noisy le Sec, and Chareton. The two-thirds of four others are finished, namely, Rosny, Nogent-sur Marne, Ivry, and Issy.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Cape of Good Hope papers have been received at the North and South American Coffeehouse, to the 24th January, a week later than those previously received. At the date of the last accounts, Colonel Hare was constructing rafts to cross the Orange river, in his expedition against the Anglo-Dutch rebels. The Boers appear to have made an effort to induce a simultaneous attack on the colony by the Caffre tribes on the border; and for that purpose they had spread reports that they had defeated the troops sent against them. The Gaika tribes are said to have fallen into the snare; the covert symptom being that they had commenced their usual predatory warfare by stealing cattle from the border farms; but the depredations of the natives on the frontier are a standing grievance.

The courts-martial held on Colonel Palmer for the surrender of Ghuznee, and on Captains Anderson, Troup, Boyd, Eyre, and Waller, have terminated in the acquittal of those officers from the charges brought against them for certain acts during the last campaign in Affghanistan. The investigation into the conduct of General Shelton and Major Pottinger was still going forward.

Nothing certain appears to have been known of the state of affairs at Cabul.

The intelligence from Scinde is to the effect that the Ameers doubtful policy and intriguing conduct had during some time kept up the alternation of war and peace, have been influenced by the presence of Major Outram, with whom they are all personally acquainted, to enter into terms, which will, it is expected, establish a system of good intelligence between them and the Government of India.

The attention of the Indian Government is directed towards its finances the extra company added last year to each Indian regiment has been ordered to be abolished, and the men are to be absorbed into the army, whereby a diminution of 18000 men will be effected, and a consequent saving of expenditure will be effected.

From Wilmer's American News Letter April 4.

The decided improvement which has lately manifested itself in the trade of this country, will be viewed with satisfaction by our American friends; as, from their intimate connexion with us, a corresponding effect is certain of being produced upon their own interests. The firmness which has characterised this improvement entirely divests it of any feature which might lead us to attribute it to a mere momentary cause, and to view it as one of those bright gleams of prosperity which might naturally be expected occasionally to visit us, even if our commercial interests were fast crumbling to decay. Such, we rejoice to say, is not the case; and we have no hesitation in attributing the present fortunate event to causes natural in their operation, and lasting in their effects.

CHARTISTS.—The trials of the Chartists concerned in the late disturbances concluded at Lancaster, on the 9th ult., in the acquittal of twenty one out of fifty two prisoners. The remaining thirty one, amongst whom was Feargus O'Connor, were found guilty upon various counts in the indictment. The sentences were deferred.

COMMERCIAL.—There has been very little animation in the money market, as capital remains abundant, and the rates of interest extremely low. The price of Consols has been as light as 96 3-4 to 7-8.

There is a movement in contemplation by the holders of American State Stocks, to induce the Government to use their influence with the indebted States to make a due provision for the interest on their state debts, as a necessary preliminary to the restoration of American credit. Lord Aberdeen has declined giving them his support, it being his opinion that the general Government had nothing to do with the issue of State bonds, and, therefore, no means of enforcing payment of them.

The Manchester market for goods has been in a very healthy state throughout the month, and a large business done, especially in the plain fabrics adapted for India and China.

The French journals are principally occupied with the debates on the various questions which the opposition have mooted in order to test the strength of the administration. On the third of March, the ministry obtained a majority of 45 on the question that the amount of the Secret Service Fund should be maintained. In the Peers, on the same question, the majority in favour of the ministry was

His Majesty the King of the French consented (and who imagined he would ever hesitate in the matter?) that the Prince Joinville shall condescend to name the husband of the sister of the Emperor of the Brazils.

The Boundary Treaty.—In the House of Commons last night Sir Robert Peel stated in reply to a question from Lord John Russell, that he had received despatches from Mr. Fox, with a copy of the President's message and the communication of Mr. Webster, and that he would lay them before the House. The Government had not given any instructions to Lord Ashburton that modified Lord Aberdeen's despatch of December, 1841—by its principle he was determined to adhere.

EMIGRATION.—The most remarkable falling off in foreign emigration, as compared with that of previous years, has taken place this season. Probably, not more than one fourth of the usual number have gone out.

Some annoymous donor has presented to the Bishop of London, £5,000, to be expended in building a church in London.

A contagious complaint is now very prevalent in the metropolis, which is very severely felt by the police and others exposed to the weather, particularly during the night. It attacks first the mucous membranes of the stomach and lungs, and produces general debility, accompanied with great depression of strength and numbness of the limbs.

His Majesty the King of Hanover is expected to arrive on a visit to this country about the middle of May.

THAMES TUNNEL.—The first two days 50,000 persons passed through, on the payment of 1d. each.

On Wednesday last, five men employed in a colliery near Bilston, were unhappily thrown down a pit and killed.

The Smyrna Journal states that a butcher of that city has been arrested for sending to market quarters and joints of large dogs, and selling them as mutton.

KNARESBOROUGH.—There are upwards of three hundred houses unoccupied in the borough of Knaresborough, which contains a population of little more than 5,000 souls.

A slight shock of an Earthquake has been felt in Liverpool and other parts of England.

THE FISHERY in Scotland has been seriously affected by the importation of that article from Germany. Scotch Salmon which used to average two shillings in the London Market, is now reduced to one shilling per pound. The best pickled herrings are reduced to 11s. per barrel, and red herrings, which used to sell for 24s. are now down to 16s., and a further reduction is expected.

ANTICIPATION.—Mr. O'Connell, it appears, has announced the erection of a building, which is to serve as the Irish houses of parliament, after the repeal.

THE COMET.—After much research, Dr. Forster has succeeded in discovering the Comet.

The Portuguese Government obstinately refuse to ratify the Commercial Treaty with Great Britain.

The Duke of Manchester died at Rome on the 18th of March.

Acquittal of McNaughton.—The trial of McNaughten for the Murder of the much lamented Mr Drummond, has resulted in an acquittal, on the ground of insanity. It is thought that he will be imprisoned during her Majesty's pleasure, probably for life.

Another most extensive Fire occurred in Liverpool on the 7th of March. It broke out in the extensive works of Messrs. Fawcett, Preston, and Co., iron-founders, engine-makers, &c., and has destroyed many valuable buildings.

THE LOYALIST.

SAINT JOHN, N. B., APRIL 20, 1843.

THE conduct we have hitherto pursued, in boldly meeting danger, whenever circumstances rendered such a course necessary or advisable; and in never succumbing to faction, however formidable in appearance, or well supported by talent, needs no comment. The slightest glance at the past will convince the impartial, that at the commencement of our carreer we had difficulties of no ordinary magnitude to cope with; and the present proudly testifies to the successful result of our struggle. Who in the community remembers not the language of the Mirror, previous to our Press being put into operation? What then filled the columns of that organ of sedition, but the sayings of Daniel O'Connell, the leather lunged vender of scurrility and anarchy, and the doings of a faction, or some unhallowed Repeal Association? What was then lauded but treason and disaffection, or cultivated, but the hatred and malignity of the Roman Catholics towards their Protestant brethren? The venomous seeds of dissatisfaction, political and religious, were spread in this City, with a boldness almost unparalelled in the annals of time. The agitators moved not with the sly, insidious steps of assassins, but marched with a confidence, we would scarcely believe, the most unlimited success could lend a cause so revolting to every feeling of humanity. Yet when the energy of the times demanded, we painted in its true colours, the diabolical nature of such proceedings: applied the lash of satire, and unveiled to an abused, deceived and indignant public, the rankling causes that prompted such conduct. The monsters unmasked, shrunk into themselves, and if the Press they conducted has not become thoroughly reformed, it is at least, apparently moderate.

We do not intend to open old sores and minutely discuss the causes that rendered the stand we took, absolutely necessary to the peace, security, and comfort of the community, nor will we descant on our claims to Public Patronage, it is enough that we have done our duty, fearlessly and faithfully; and that while we remain at the head of a journal, we will continue to do so. The magnitude of the interest, and necessity of supporting it, are subjects which our patrons are fully qualified for considering and determining without suggestions from us, and in their hands we leave them.

We return thanks to the public for their liberal patronge, at the same time, hinting to those who have not yet handed us the amount of their subscription, the necessity of doing so, to enable us to conduct the paper in an effectual manner.

The performance of the Amateurs was as usual, on last evening, very gratifying to the audience; they were, however disturbed by the mischievous conduct of some boys, who had provided themselves with crackers which they used with a delight proportionate to the annoyance they occasioned.

The "Halifax Post," says, that Mexican dollars, made of German silver, and plated by the new magnetic process, are in circulation. The counterfeit is so good, that it is necessary to cut into the metal before its composition can be determined.

More Earthquakes!—Island reported to have sunk in the sea!—A note on the slate in Keefler's Reading Rooms of advices from Bermuda to the 2nd inst. state that 'the passengers by the steamer Medway report that on the 22nd of March, at half past three o'clock, A.
