STUDENT GOVERNMENT

In continuation of an editorial which appeared in these pages last week, under the heading "Free Speech", we wish to bring forward the following points:

- (1). The enthusiasm exhibited by the students who attended the Union meeting on Friday, January 19, tends to discount the theory expressed in some quarters that the Union is in decline.
- (2). Representative Government will not solve the problem facing student legislators.
- (3). Representative Government might be needed at U. N. B., but it is not wanted.
- (4). What the students do want is Free Speech.

These four statements summarize comprehensively, impressions formed at the recent meeting of the Union, from the reaction of the general student body to the various situations which developed in the course of events. They are statements, not arguments; and as statements they sum up a peculiar situation in the development and procedure of student government at this university, which will be relieved neither by the introduction of purely representative government, as it has been proposed on former occasions, nor by continuation of the present union system. This situation, at a glance, is one in which the student body demands adequate administration of student affairs by the council at present in use, and, at the same time, requires that any proposition under consideration by that council be submitted for final approbation to a wide open meeting where the heckler and pretender, the quibbler and the clown is permitted equal rights with the sincere student.

The Union was originally designed to meet the requirements of a body of sixty or seventy students, and now that it has grown to five or six times its original size, its constitutional purpose, that of student independence, has kept it in existence, although the students do realize that, at the present time, it is more a place of amusement than of sincere consideration; and that many students attend or stay away from its sessions, according to the attractiveness of the programme outlined. The Union as a popular meeting place when some popular question is under discussion, is by no means a declining body. The Union as a governing body, is an excellent Mock Parliament.

Although this is realized to a great extent by a large number of those who do attend Union meetings and who are genuinely concerned at the state of affairs, these students definitely do not want government by representation, solely because they wish to represent themselves in any question which might arise. This, they feel they would be unable to do should the so-called Representative Council come into being.

What appears to be needed at the present time is a compact form of government, able to function quickly and efficiently, yet with some provision made for the unofficial yet interested student who wishes to express his own personal opinions. Some of these, desirable qualities are seen in the proposed Students' Representative Council. Its sweeping power over student affairs and its comparatively small bulk should tend toward rapid legislation; yet in Section 3 provision is made for any student desiring an audience. This proposed form of government may not be the sought after ideal, but at least it will do away with the quorum and quibbling difficulties of the Union.

Canadian College Comment

Does a student enter campus activities merely for the publicity he receives from it? Such was the burning question asked by the Oregon Emerald in a recent article. The Daily was of the opinion that such was the case.

Our answer is that three times out of five he does and he does so because he believes it to be the quickest, surest and safest way to become popular on the campus.

Next we might wonder whether men and women of the state enter political life for the publicity they receive from it. Our answer here is that one out of five does.

Whether students are public minded enough to work to attain positions from which they may administer their own ideas which they believe will benefit Society, or in the local case, the campus, cannot be determined. It is usually found that when a student is selected to fill a position, he or she will throw whole-hearted effort into satisfactory execution. This, we also add, may be done for the selfish reason of securing another and more noticeable job in the future. Little harm comes from this psychological urge.

We commend the man who takes the work, puts his heart and soul into it and does it without expectation of recompense. He is the student who will benefit most from the experience he enjoys and who will continue his advancement when all means of public notice have been withdrawn.

Is it the picture in the paper that urges him to complete his task? Perhaps it is, but what harm can that do? His acquaintance is broadened, his ability as an executive is increased and he may consider his college career a huge success.

Still we admire the man who will shrink from public sight.

Beard Competition Held at Univ. B. C.

Vancouver, B. C.—A beard-growing contest is being sponsored here by the Ubysey, undergraduate newspaper of the University of British Columbia. This contest is a direct challenge to certain remarks made about the men of U. B. C. by a Mr. O. P. Demerara, hirsute Vancouver clubman.

"U. B. C. men have gone pansy", he stated, with fire in his eye. "I visit the campus, and what do I observe? Callow youths whose god is the razor, smooth-shaven chins whose utter nakedness is in itself an obscenity. Where are the fine, free, luxuriant, bushy beards that stamp a man as, well, as a man? Why, I remember when I was a lad at Vassar..."

First Step

The question raised is one that has been too long with us already, declares the Ubysey. The beard must come back, and as a first step in the right direction, the present contest has been thrown open to every male on the campus—a contest, the object of which is to bring back the beard in a blaze of hirsute glory.

Beards will be judged on the following points: Texture, durability, area covered, fire-resistance, color, shagginess, length, aesthetic appeal.

Contestants have been warned against the use of false whiskers, hair restorer, or any other artificial aid.

COLLEGE GIRLS EAT MORE

Lancaster, Pa.—The fact that girls at the Millersville State Teachers college are becoming bigger and heartier eaters is attributed to "the Mae West Influence" by Aaron H. Palmer, steward at the college. —Daily Athenaeum.

Sixty-two sophomore medics at Queen's university, Canada, were fined $2 each and required to post bond of $3 each for the balance of the term when they were found guilty of hazing freshmen undergoing initiation by rubbing rotten tomatoes and eggs in their hair. Freshmen also were required to walk in molasses in their bare feet, and then through grain, after which they were made to put on their shoes. —McGill Daily

ESSAY ON MAN

Man is what woman marries.

Men have two feet, two hands, and sometimes two wives, but never more than one collar, one collar button, or one idea at a time.

Like Turkish cigarettes, men are all made of the same material, the only difference is that some are better disguised than others.

Generally speaking, they may be divided into three classes: husbands, bachelors and widowers.

An eligible bachelor is a mess of obstinacy entirely surrounded with suspicion.

Husbands are of three varieties, prizes, surprises, and consolation prizes.

Making a husband out of a man is one of the highest plastic arts known to civilization. It requires science, sculpture and common sense, faith, hope and charity—mostly charity.

It is a psychological marvel that a soft, fluffy, tender, violet-scented sweet thing like a woman, should enjoy kissing a big, awkward, stubby-chinned, tobacco and bayrum scented thing like a man.

If you flatter a man it frightens him to death, and if you don't you bore him to death. If you permit him to make love to you he gets tired of you in the end, and if you don't, he gets tired of you in the beginning.

If you wear gay colours, rouge, startling hats, he hesitates to take you out, and if you wear a little brown toque and a tailor-made suit, he takes you out and stares all evening at a woman in gay colours, rouge and a startling hat.

If you are the clinging-vine type he doubts whether you have a brain, and if you are the modern type, an advanced and independent woman, he doubts whether you have a heart. If you are silly he longs for a bright mate, and if you are brilliant he longs for a playmate. If you are popular with other men he is jealous, and if you are not he hesitates to marry a wallflower.

If you please him he seldom mentions it, but if you displease him he never fails to tell you about it, especially if you happen to be his wife.—Ex.
