

Prof. James L. Tryon of M. I. T. To Visit This University

Specialist In Admissions and Education Guidance Will Speak Here On October 27 At Present In Administrative Office of Massachusetts Institute of Technology

A RECENT dispatch from the University Office states that Professor James L. Tryon of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is making a tour among the institutions of higher learning in the Maritime Provinces, and that he will speak Friday, October 27, in Fredericton.

Professor Tryon has specialized in admissions and educational guidance for many years, but entered upon this work after broad training in the fields of journalism and international law. While engaged in the work of the American Peace Movement, he was sent as a delegate to several European peace congresses and traveled widely in the United States and Canada, speaking in churches, colleges and before business organizations.

He was especially interested in promoting the celebration of the Peace Centenary in 1914, the work for which was interrupted by the war. He made a tour in behalf of that movement which extended from Hamilton to Halifax and spoke in Fredericton, Saint John, Wolfville, and Halifax, where he found warm friends. His work for the Centenary Committee culminated in an address on Anglo-American friendship, which he gave at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, while waiting in England during the opening days of the War for an ocean passage home. He has always been a strong supporter of fraternal relations among the English-speaking people.

At the close of the War, he became identified with education and gave courses in international law at the University of Maine and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but, being appointed to the administrative office, gave his attention to the subject of admissions, of which he has had charge at the Institute of Technology for the past fourteen years. He is sometimes called the ambassador of Technology because of his wide travels in continuance of its policy of establishing personal contact with sister institutions. His object is to exchange ideas with other universities, to see personally young men who have indicated a desire to come to the Institute, and to give them educational guidance which will enable them to carry out their plans for post-graduate work. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the American College Entrance Examination Board. He has made a study of university policies and programs of instruction, and has prepared extensively written reports on his observations, about which he often speaks to faculty groups of educators in the course of his visits.

The list of places which he will visit in the Maritime Provinces follows:

Parisien Poverty

by George Gordon Ladds

I saw a child,
Sweetly mild,
Nose against a window pane
Wet with rain.
Yearning for bread—
A curly head,
Boots torn and old—
Toes a-cold—
Jerkin, dirty, damp—
A Parisien scamp.
A crucifix he wore,
Symbol sore
Dripping with rain:
On a silver chain,
Dripping with rain:
Gift his mother gave,
Now in her grave.
Five francs I gave him.
This Gallic Tim—
Left him standing there,
Murmuring a prayer.

BOOKS

"PRESENTING LILY MARS"

by Booth Tarkington
Doubleday, Doran and Gundy, Toronto. $2.50

"Presenting Lily Mars" is probably the best production of Mr. Booth Tarkington in recent years. It is an interesting and distinctive story. The portrayal of theatrical life, of which little is known by the layman and much by Mr. Tarkington, is in itself a remarkable study. The plot is unexceptional. A girl from a small town who has stage ambitions realizes them and shows herself to be an actress of genius. But the slightly worn theme loses itself in the excellent handling and characterization. There are two notable characters in the story, Lily Mars, whose gifts and troubles make a brilliant portrait, and George Hurley, whose cynicism, hardness and introspection give us the most masterful figure of the book. The novel holds one from start to finish.
