The government has finally clamped down on all academic slackers. Those in the past who have "flunked" on Christmas exams with the hope of gaining lost marks in May will have to study a bit harder. According to this new ruling students must concentrate sufficiently on the first term's work as well as the second term's work in order to be assured of a pass mark.

Evidently the ruling is not rigid and binding enough to permit the government calling up a student into the armed forces immediately. The university and District Officer Commanding have the final say in the status of the student. The "status quo" cannot exist but we suggest the university and members of the faculty be lenient enough to offer a student another attempt providing he has shown sufficient initiative. Too often students have been "flunked" because of personal hatred of a student. Several times in the past students have failed when they had sufficient intelligence and knowledge to make the required pass mark. Students should not accept this as any indication, however, that the university will be lenient enough to pass the majority of them. The time has come when social activities must take a secondary place for the duration. The student must apply himself to the utmost of his ability. Yet how can he do this when authorities continue to give them dirty breaks? We cite as an example the case of the student harvesters who are returning from the west. They are to receive no credit for C.O.T.C. time lost, according to orders issued by National Defense Headquarters. Beside catching up in lectures, the students are also required to catch up in all C.O.T.C. parades. Is this democratic? The students gave time and energy for a harder life out west. For this service the Dominion Government has ordered them to do double work in spite of the impression the students were given before they embarked that they would be granted leave of absence for all the drill they missed. If this be true we see no reason for remaining in the university, so we would like some responsible person to answer such questions as, "If military training is so impor-

War Effort Committee

At long last, a War Effort Committee has been formed. If this committee functions properly, it can be a big help in the war effort but as yet, the committee has not contributed. We do not blame the committee, because they were not appointed at an earlier date. The students and members of the S.R.C. can be blamed for not adjutating for such a committee at an earlier date.

This is all in the past. The committee has been formed so now the main object is "get going!" The first thing we suggest is selling war stamps to members of the C.O.T.C. and U.A.T.C. But we suggest you do not end here. The members of the Ladies' Society have money so why not approach them. We hope this suggestion is an incentive for the committee to better U.N.B.'s War Effort.

Two Paths?

Why are there two paths crossing the campus from the Arts Building to the road in front of the Residence? Surely your feet are not that big! Last spring a new path was built which at first was rather difficult upon which to walk, consequently the students tried to find an easier way by making another path.

In the meantime the new path has hardened which makes the walking much easier. Why then must students persist in tramping earth just off the main path? The hillside would look much better if the small path were eliminated. The faculty are attempting to repair the campus as much as possible so why not cooperate.

There is nothing that makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them. Wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.

Freedom is not a primitive right but a civilized achievement; it is the gift, not of a lawless savagery but of a well-ordered society.

tant why not don the uniform? If trained technicians and university graduates are required why not turn out university graduates instead of army officers?

THE ONCE OVER

The Drill Sergeant Speaks
(Reprinted from the Seattle Star)

I
You think you've a tough job
In Iceland or Nome;
I'll swap you the one that
They've slipped me at home:
I'm drilling the women
The best that I can,
But can't yell the things that
I'd yell at a man!

II
"Eyes right, ya gorilla!"
I once used to shout,
But that and "Hey, fathead!"
Are both strictly out;
Of jobs in the service
The hardest is mine—
I've got to discard all
My old army line.

III
Did privates toe in? I
Could yell, "Lissen, stupe!"
You do that again you'll Get socked for a loop!"
Chins up, ya baboons!" was
My cry through the day,
But drilling the dames, well
It ain't the same way!

IV
"Eyes right! Are ye cockeyed?"
I'd yell in loud tones,
But now it's "Please try once Again, Miss J. Jones!"
"Hey, throw out your chest! Stow
That barroom effect!"
Are into the discard; they Ain't quite correct!

—H. J. Phillips.

WAR ON WOMEN III

Women is women is women is women. And there is no getting away from it. Schopenhauer didn't think they were so hot; he called them "the short-legged race. That's not strictly true—we know one at home that is five-eleven and still growing. If you still believe Schopenhauer look at a Petty cartoon.

We don't think women are too bad. They're all right to talk to—that is, if you can get a word in edgewise. Harsher critics say that their vocabulary is limited to "cute." This isn't so. Even the slightly backward little thing has a vocabulary of ten or twelve words. For instance, "divine," "Clark Gable," "simply."

Houseparty dates come from much higher I.Q. brackets. Some of them speak in complete sentences almost. And on a wider range of topics. Fashions, movies, roommates, fashions, carnival, movies, fashions, dancing. The Stork, fashions, movies and fashions.

They're nice things to look at. Sort of like cars and sunsets and window displays. They usually fit their clothes pretty well, sweaters too. There is good foundation for this—all the way down the line.

Women have cute imaginations. Men would never think of walking around with a basket of fruit on their heads. Women do. That shows they're cleverer than men and have a better sense of balance.

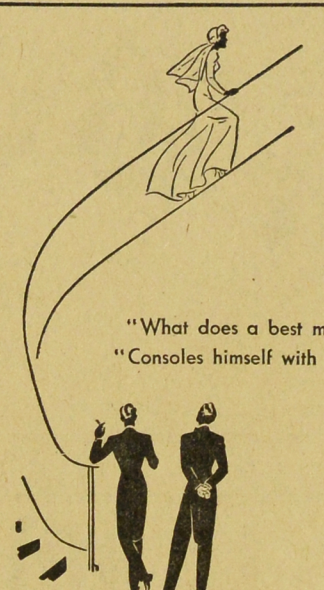

There are any number of ways in which women are better than men. They make better mothers. They're fuzzier. And if you want to get down to creature comforts, they're chummer. (See "Terry and the Pirates.")

Women are handy things about the house. They cook, they sew, they knit, they change diapers, they put flowers in vases. They go to school and learn all these things. Freud says they are good for other things, too.

Yeah, women are all right.

GOLD FROM THE SEA

According to some scientific estimates, one cubic mile of sea water contains $25,000,000 worth of gold, and with the great demand for the precious metal the ocean should be a source of supply for any nation with access to sea water. But one German Nobel Prize-winner, Fritz Haber, after devoting six years to the search for some cheap way of securing this sea-gold, could discover no cheap way of attaining the treasure. Now comes Professor Colin G. Fink, of Columbia University, who has discovered that gold is crystalline, and he thinks it might be made to deposit itself electrically, like electric plating. But the difficulty is that the moment gold is dissolved in the sea it becomes non-crystalline. However, Dr. Fink says he has discovered how to capture gold even in this non-crystalline state. But he has not, apparently, discovered how to secure it in sufficient quantities to make it profitable. One man, after finding how to get gold out of sea water, found that he secured just a pin-head of gold from a ton of sea water, and it cost five times its value. The sea will probably hold its gold for some time to come.

About a dozen.
You're wrong. You could only eat one, because after that your stomach wouldn't be empty.
