

HERE 'N THERE IN 105

We have some literary people in our hut. One of our famed chemists was in the laboratory the other day fooling around with magnesium. Experiment finished, Dr Tigges looked over his notes:

"Look," he said, "I might call you a big HUNK of man, but it's hardly the word to describe a piece of magnesium. It's a good word though!"

These housing application forms caused a decided flurry among the boys. We suspect that the Dean had something to do with it— "(Number of children -- as of next fall: (If issue is in doubt, add one to present total))"—! Since preference is given to veterans with children, many decided to get a "home" at any price. A few fellows rushed immediately to the telephone to call their wives, legal and otherwise. Others just stuck out their Atlas-like chests and rushed away with a devilish gleam in their eyes. Only the unfortunate single blokes were left for the following lectures. All in all, just a little more homework, I guess.

Many of the original inhabitants of dear 105 will soon be leaving. One fellow from Montreal (he doesn't live in Ontario Street) will soon be gone. He has met the parents — they even came to get him! It is rumoured that he has also filled out a Housing Application Form.

Here's good news, you literary folks! We are offering five dollars (cash) for the best contribution for the Alexander Brunswickan during this term. All contributions will be judged by the Editor and Staff and prize awarded the day the last issue goes to press. Come one, come all. Stories, articles, verse, drawings, photographs, all welcome. Lets prove that Alexander College can really turn out a BRUNSWICKAN!!

This fellow's room-mate almost got to the last formal. At the last moment she refused to go, so he stayed home and drank milk. "Milk", that is! Later on he had such a headache that he even attended the local night club.

These formal "do's" are quite the thing..... some fellows dash away and forget the orchids for les femmes. Other fellows canvass the rooms for little glasses to put coke in. Some people even say that the "Power House" sells ginger ale, too.

One fellow from up Edmundston way is pretty particular. A divine angel (?) called him up and wanted this Romeo to escort her to the dance. Although she had two tickets and a bottle of malt, (hic), he refused to go. Too tired, I guess — and I have to pin artistic pictures on the wall of my boudoir to get the desired effect. Woe is me!

Not all the boys are tired. Three of four fellows go up to the gym a couple of times a week for physical jerks. The only explanation, I hear, is the fact that the swimming season is coming up soon (we hope) and they can galavant about on the beaches and slay the local belles. That's one way of getting them.

The grapevines says that a field day is being arranged for Alexander co-eds (the whole four of them). There's only one qualification — shorts (very short) must be worn! My, my, what a field day! Oh boy!

A few of the Society Fellows play bridge, too. Sometimes we take a few minutes off from studying — very few. One all-star athlete (he played short-stop in the first ball game of the season) usually visits the bank next day. One portly fellow (especially in tails) and his partner are pretty good. They use a secret formula which befuddles the opposition. One fellow (no relation to Dow's Brewery) wakes up in the morning bidding four no-trump!
