

READING RUMORS

by "Mardie" Long

Co-Ed Intramural Basketball got off to a fine start last Thursday evening when four full (and then some) teams went into action. In Game One the Cubettes edged the Bruinettes by a count of 8-6. In Game Two, the Giantettes played the Yankettes and came out on the long end of a 28-12 score. All teams showed great enthusiasm and it is hoped that the large turnout will continue. The only casualty of the rough and ready contests was Eleanor Barker, who slightly strained the ligaments of her left ankle.

On Saturday afternoon the Co-eds were hostesses to the wives of our college students at an informal tea held in the Ladies' Reading Room. In spite of adverse weather conditions, a large number of the Mrs. Joe College found their way "up the hill" where they were graciously received by Mrs. Gregg and Co-Ed

President Blanche Law and introduced by Marye Forbes to the friendly gathering in the Reading Room. After a short interval of getting acquainted, tea, fancy sandwiches and cakes were served. Mrs. Toole and Dr. Thompson poured for the first hour and Miss E. McLeod and Miss M. L. Whimster poured for the second hour. All Co-Eds were invited. Marye Forbes and her committee deserve a vote of thanks from all of us for having things so well organized. We hope you enjoyed coming, Mrs. Joe, as much as we enjoyed having you.

Well, the dance of the year (from the female point of view) has come and gone and was an enormous success. Saturday Nite, through the doors of the Jim, streamed an array of Dogparchers and Sunk Hollowers that would have given Al Capa night-mars in three different shades. Daisy Maes in screaming plaids and odd sox "brung" willing Abners in still louder plaids, patches and rope braces. Many a Mammy Yokum lit up her corn-cob pipe between dances and managed a few indifferent "arags" before rigor mortis set in. (Continued on page five)

- Eager Beaver -

And it came to pass on the eve of Frie that the furry ones came forth from the land of Lodge along with the other denizens of the swamplands of Jim to partake of the frivolity of eve in the style of social. Verily, they noted that the great ones of the tribe didst drag bag from many distant lands, yea, even unto the land of Rodentraze. Verily it were the braves that sallied forth, without homage to Baccus, to encounter the mades of the land of Norm. Lead into battle by Bear-Soy and the Gallant one, soon didst the furry ones chow true nature and with howl of wolf descend on the fair mades. And few were the banshees from Up the hill such that even sho of the land of the teapartie was missing, verily, even didst the Kinnie-one and Audrie, leader-of-cheer, with moans of anguish and many tears leave ere danz didst begin. Yea, verily, they hadst had it! Amid the song and clamor didst the mightiest warrior of the fac arrive and wish well the success of the eve and stemup all round. As all good things must come to end thusly didst social, and from foxhole of chair and chesterfield the speni warriors came forth to embark on the dangerous vcyage home—Yea, didst some cheat and take home two.

As the frigid dawn beckoned all to class, many were the tales of adventure brought forth. Even Montreal jim didst greet dawn on bridge of iron horse from land of devon and Budking, who with much gnashing of incisors, didst break all records and arrive home ere dawn. Verily, THEY hadst had it! Even didst Moo, of town-of-rabbit, scorn George, and go home with Jim of hairy hp. Some say that George didst cry in beer and verily it was much diluted.

Another moon having withered away, the warriors strong of heart, didst line up to listen to Ethyl of talking wire. With many prayers to the great one, EAGER BEAVER, to guide them and look over them, the warriors made their choice for dragbag of approaching Sat. Yea, loud were the lament of the spurned ones, refused after much pleading. Even the great warrior, Don-the-one was dragged forth by the wiles of the rube. It was let known that even the great Daddie, Duke of Dork, was sought as cohort to the famed one of Bos. Some say that "Daddie ducked" and later died of frustration but the truth shall go down in the Great Book of the Tribe for the use of future generations.

With the coming of the Sat. dragbag the WDWGTGanyway club, famous in colleges from coast to (Continued on page five)
