

BUNION ON RAMPAGE, SADISTIC GUSHER LOOSE

WITH casualties still uncounted, the rampage of the "Water Boy" drew a parallel to the frenzied surge which recently visited the streets of Camden, New Jersey, and a wild-eyed killer who rampaged over our hill with grimacing trigger-finger last week-end. Still loose, was the sadistic in his furious onslaught, "The gusher" at present time had evaded all attempts to ensnare him, and had even failed to respond to the wails of his screaming mother, who sought to lure him out with hysterical cries of "Water-Boy! Where are you hiding?"

Bunyon's break-up was not wholly unexpected. Prominent psychologists who had occasion to come in contact with him, as well as many of his more intimate friends had forecast such a showdown. However, reaction was varied, and some notable observations were uncovered in a canvass of those survivors and less critically wounded victims of his one-man annihilation campaign.

A member of the swim team had this to say of Bunyon's purge: "He was always friendly in a hungry sort of way. I first began to suspect him when he began to stop at every fire-hydrant. Seemed fascinated by the potential geyser. I'm fortunate to have escaped him. In my capacity, that would have been... well, what an embarrassing way to die!"

Then there was the co-ed who had been revived by artificial respiration, explained, "I went to sleep on the beach and the tide came in!"

While searching for the key to his "break-up," Bunyon was never uncovered. During his infancy, the unfortunate Bunyon had always been a crank maniac and a vicious, Bible student. To illustrate, his record on a local pin-ball machine stands among the highest ever registered, and it is generally known that he may recite from memory the complete biblical account of "Damon and Pythias" at the slightest provocation.

Although the sadistic traits had always been evident in his character, Bunyan had always been well liked, and it is a matter of concern to all that his eminent career, which included pursuits in the field of journalism and others less mentionable, should wind up in this manner.

TRUEMAN ISSUES—

though he must be able to do that—but for the sake of the work itself, the scholarship which he is acquiring, and the values which he comes to recognize in the ability to stand on his own feet. We now modify our Christmas examination scheme in the hope of doing more than we have done hitherto to assist the student in what I have called one of his many tasks."

A. W. TRUEMAN, President.
October 19, 1949.

Marked Opposition
Unofficial reports stated that the motion met with marked opposition before its acceptance at the faculty meeting, and a poll of student opinion, (which incidentally, will not affect the move even moderately) disclosed a majority of the students as being very much opposed to it.

"Pile-up" Might Result
Arguments presented by the students in favour of their attitude were varied, but centred chiefly about a consideration of the "pile-up" which might result at the time of the final examinations. Other major points raised were in connection with the incentive to "coast" which might be accentuated with the absence of a Christmas time evaluation. This will now consist of a personal adjustment by the individual student, and all feel that this is not inclined to be too accurate.

Most informed observers agree that the new system will demand a greater amount of application on the part of the individual student, and it has been remarked that here lies the crux of the entire matter. The shifting of the burden from the faculty to the students which the adopted plan will incur has been noted to form the basis for the split of opinion which is evident.

The quarterbacking of Naisbitt was excellent as he repeatedly called plays that resulted in large gains. The U.N.B. line was tremendous throughout the second half, especially on the offensive as they opened up holes in the opposition line.

In the fourth quarter the U.N.B. team marched from their own 10 yard line with line smashes down to the Moncton territory where playing-coach Bill Gellan plunged over the goal line for U.N.B.'s second touchdown. The first attempted convert was called back on a Moncton offside, but MacGregor's educated toe sent the ball between the uprights on the second attempt for the 14th U.N.B. point. At the close of the game U. N. B. were within one play of another touchdown as play ended on the Moncton three yard line with the ball in U. N. B.'s possession.

It was very gratifying to the team to see such a large crowd on hand to see the game and to hear the spontaneous cheers that arose again and again as the game wound up. The team has worked hard this year to make Canadian Football a success at the University and their efforts were certainly rewarded Saturday when they showed the fans (football and rugby) that this Canadian game is definitely as thrilling to watch as any other campus sport.

Keeping Up With

choosing of the U.N.B. girl's basketball team. The intramural teams are up almost all the co-ed games. We hope that this team will do the trick with Mount A. this year. There have been no dates set and probably won't be until after Christmas but our competitors after that date will be S.H.S., Woodstock, the North School, McAdam, and of course Mt. A.

Along the bowling lines we witnessed a practice game the night of the 18th in which the freshmen won over the sophs and the juniors over the seniors. At this game a certain Sylvia Brown topped the existing alley record of 92 made by Shirley Kenney, with 108 as her score. Congrats! A controversy between the ten and five pin factions was terminated with a vote that put the five pins in the position of honor.

The very latest swimming news is the definite pinning of Tuesday and Thursday from 4.30 to 5.30 p.m. as strictly gals. Anybody happy? Mixed swimming, same hours, Monday and Wednesday.
